Health Inspectors clamp down

Schools at Ganges must put in sewer system within 60 days

Schools in Ganges must clean up their sewage disposal systems within 60 days at a cost of up to $150,000.

Last week trustees of Gulf Islands School Board learned that the Capital Region Health inspectors have condemned the present operation. Condemnation comes on the eve of a community sewer project.

Holding tanks are not feasible, commented Chairman Charles Baltzer. There are two collection services on the island and the available dumping grounds would be inadequate, he told his colleagues.

The two trucks, hauling night and day could not keep pace with the volume from the schools.

Health department does not have to explain how to correct the situation, trustees were told.

The chairman added more

The health hazard does not exist in the school grounds, said Chairman Baltzer.

French program at Salt Spring is of the best, compared with other districts," stated Ann Foerster during a discussion at last Thursday's meeting of the Gulf Islands School Board.

Mrs. Foerster and other trustees attended three French classes in Grades 1, 4 and 7.

Irene Wright was the teacher in each case.

Only criticism offered was the suggestion that a 20-minute class makes it a rather tight schedule.

Students in the school enjoy two-and-a-half hours a week of instruction in French.

How does that compare with the Outer Islands, asked Tom Davidson.

Not very favourably, admitted Larry Holbrook, supervisor. The problem is staffing, he

Referring to the Salt Spring Island program, Mrs. Foerster told the board that the graduates may not be able to speak French fluently, but they will have this exposure to French which prepares them to speak it later.

A lot of chicks on island

An error occurred in a recent issue of Driftwood, and being a rare occurrence at the best of times, the sale of chicks deserves some mention.

It was reported that some 2,000 day-old chicks had been sold by Foxglove Farm and Garden Supply in the last few months. The figure was far too modest, Tom Gossett told Driftwood last week. It was closer to 8,000, he said.

Poll calls for retention of market in park area

Poll of Salt Spring Island opinion taken for two weeks by Driftwood shows a sweeping majority in favour of retaining the Farmers' Market in Centennial Park.

On Tuesday evening the ballots were counted, to show 225 in favour of retention of the market, against eight asking for it to be removed.

The ballot required that each voter give his name and address to avoid duplication of votes. Readers were also invited to make a copy of the ballot in order that more than one member of a household could vote if they wished.

The vote was unofficial. It was simply a means of Ballots are being held in case anyone might challenge the results of the poll.

This is not the first time Driftwood has invited the views of readers on an issue concerning islands administration.

When planners were debating the minimum lot sizes in watershed areas, the Capital Regional Board authorized a ballot in Driftwood and the result of that poll had an influence on later legislation.

Salt Spring Island Recreation Commission recently ruled the Centennial Park out for the Saturday morning Farmers' Market and negotiated a new site in the former Mouat's lumber yard. Deadline is June 1.

The ballots were also informative. Comments were made by voters regarding the administration of the market. Many were leery of fleas and asked for no flea markets. Others were fearful that the market might grow too big for the area.

Extra days holiday at Ganges

Elementary students on Salt Spring Island are to get a longer summer holiday this year.

Last week the board of trustees of Gulf Islands School District considered a proposal to close the school on Thursday, June 23.

This will enable renovation crews to get started early and have the building ready for school opening in the fall, trustees were told.

On Ivan Mouat's recommendation, the date was delayed to Friday, June 24. Other schools will operate until Tuesday, June

Big parade and big crowd

Sun and May Day good day Saturday for Salt Spring

Bigger than average parade and a better than average attendance combined with a warmer than average May 24 weekend to bring a highly successful May Day to Ganges on Saturday.

The parade was not only bigger than in some past years, but it represented a wide range of entrants who were contributing to the annual parade for the first time, ever.

It formed up on the road outside the hospital and moved off towards Ganges at shortly after II am. In charge of the parade was Al Black, also for the first time on the island.

After winding through Ganges, the parade of floats and marching entries broke up in the grounds of the elementary

The floats spread over the field to permit the public to see them leisurely and then the parade dispersed.

Extra service is offered by library

Salt Spring Island Library will offer extra service during the month of June.

On Friday, June 3 and each Friday until June 24 the Library will be open from 11 am to 6.30 pm. This is in response to suggestions that more residents who work during normal opening hours will be able to become members. This practice will only be continued if the response proves worthwhile.

As most people know, the staff of the library is voluntary and this extension of hours will mean extra work for some.

It must prove something. On Thursday afternoon there were seven men seated at the table of the Gulf Islands School Board. Four were wearing ties. Three were not. Of those wearing ties, three were employees of the system and one was a school trustee. And of those without ties, all were trustees. And me! I was another man there and I was wearing a tie. But that doesn't prove much, either. It simply shows that times have changed and that the sporting of a tie is no longer the mark of importance. What's more, there is little or no influence from the distaff side in this business!

My Latin is weak after a lifetime away from class, but I would roughly translate the title, The Art of Criticism, by John, the Clerk. It is the name that throws me. In the original it reads Joannis Clerici ars critica, in qua ad studia, etc. The leather binding has collapsed and the worms have made some headway in the title page. The book was published at Cornhill, in London, in 1698. It is among the oldest books in my possession and I find some difficulty in making sense of it. Then I try to imagine the generations of people in 300 years who have owned it and read it. The fly-leaf bears a name, N. Pocklington, with the suggestion of dates after it. Who was Mr. Pocklington? Did he read Johannis Clerici during the 1700's? Or more recently? Where did he live? How did he live? An old book, even when its covers are parting, holds more than its message between its boards, but the chance of looking back over several centuries through the medium of an old book doesn't often present itself.

How do you judge? When the floats in Salt Spring's May Day parade were judged on Saturday, there was a fair collection of entries. Some were the result of weeks of forethought and some were thought up almost on the spur of the moment. The Alternative Circus was not a winner, but it was excellent. If there were second prizes in each class, it would make the judge's job easier. The Firemen were 100%, as ever. If there were a perpetual award, the firemen would get it. They come up with new gadgets almost every year. Every entry was worth an award, just for having entered. And what of the marchers? The Legion carrying its colours and the trail blazers of the Nature Club? And a lot of youngsters who find that journey from hospital to Ganges quite a toughy. Of course, they were all

Like last year, when he was running in Coventry, in England, for an international harriers' festival. He recalls that the Swedes had it. In that contest the Swedish contestants took all the senior classes. And that's his point. So he won the Walkathon. He was in training alright, but he's planning to run in competition with the world's runners, not just the island's.

Electronics, in one direction or another has added a new dimension to 20th century living which it obviously lacked when the century opened a long time

Electronics in the living room has taken over from the local bookstore and many a family which once would have been engaged in reading and writing is now gleefully scrutinizing the screen in the living room.

Now, this is a free world and there's a lot of free people in it. And there's no saying just how a free man should think and act.

But after watching a fair collection of entertainment on television, there can remain little doubt at all.

The family that sells its television and invests the money in a few books isn't so much going back in history as making a pretty fine gesture to its own Truth of the matter is that electronics and small children make a poor mixture. Most of us would do well to get rid of either one of them, though not necessarily both.

Public opinion and the use of park

Ballots in Driftwood's unofficial poll have been counted. By a 96.5% majority, participants favour the retention of the Farmers' Market in the Centennial Park.

Of the 233 ballots completed, eight favoured moving the market and 225 wanted it to remain where it is.

The voting is, very patently, unofficial and has no administrative value. It is, equally patently, a clear indication that the residents of Salt Spring Island who were sufficiently concerned to complete a ballot are overwhelmingly in favour of the established market site.

The results are offered to any public administration which may decide to use them. This is the result of an unofficial vote.

They may be used as a guide.

May Day and the aftermath

May Day, 1977, is a thing of the past.

On Saturday there was an enthusiastic crowd to take advantage of the exceptionally warm weather and the summery setting of the annual community day in Ganges.

It is possible that the weather had a bearing on attendance

It is unquestionably a vindication of the earlier decision of the Chamber of Commerce to continue the annual festivities. It is also a commendation of the chairman's efforts in preparing and correlating the day's program.

Mr. Kevin Bell came into it cold. One day he joined the Chamber of Commerce and next day he was chairman of May Day. It was a happy choice.

By-elections and national disunity

The results of by-elections in Quebec this week were open to interpretation by anyone who wanted to place an interpretation on them. The Liberals held those seats which the opposition had expected the Liberals to hold. That was the approximate summary.

And what of national unity?

To the average Canadian, far away from Quebec, there was the optimistic note that some Quebec voters had shown an the optimistic note that some Quebec voters had shown an interest in the national government and a support for a national party. Many west coast Canadians gained a satisfaction from the results and, in a small, uninformed way, saw the results as an indication that Canada is yet Canada, from sea, even to the sea.

The interpretation, it proved, was far from real. According to national politicians the results had done nothing for the nation and merely aided the national government in maintaining its presence.

The first results of the election were heartening. The comments of various politicians were disheartening.

Many a distant observer was left with the dismayed realization that there is more than one national disunity and that there are politicians in Canada today who place their political preferences far ahead of the national welfare.

MARKET

I would like to take this opportunity to emphatically request that the Farmers Market be kept in Centennial Park.

A beautiful and obvious location add greatly to success of such a market. Farmers markets no matter where in the world add a great deal of colour to areas in which they are located.

As we are planning to move to Salt Spring in the near future it would be nice to think that the future of the Farmer's Market would be enhanced by the beautiful surroundings of Centennial Park.

SEEK MATERIAL

Church-sponsored project, under the government summer work programme, is organizing the records of the Columbia Coast Mission for the Anglican Church Archives

The Mission was begun in 1905 by the Rev. John Antle to serve the medical and spiritual needs of logging camps on the coast between Vancouver Island and the mainland. John Antle's successors, Allan Greene and later Archdeacon Patrick Ellis, continued to serve the coastal settlements through the use of Mission ships such as the Columbia. Today the Mission is carried on by seaplane under the joint administration of the Anglican and United churches.

Any archival material pertaining to the Columbia Coast Mission and its staff over the years would be appreciated.

Letters, diaries, paintings, photographs, movie film or tape recordings that reflect the activities of the Mission over the years would be important contributions to the archives of the Church.

Sir, We've all, no doubt, heard of many peculiar government grants -- wasteful, even ridiculous and unnecessary. Well, this one surely tops the list.

I read about it in the Province newspaper on the front page. 'The Canadian Labour Congress (CLC) has accepted a $10 million federal grant to be used to train union officials. Under an agreement by Labour Minister John Munro and CLC president Joe Morris, the government will provide $2 million a year for five years. An additional $600,000 a year for five years will be given for the training of union officers not affiliated with the 2.3 million member congress.'

How's that for a new twist to the how to quickly get rid of the taxpayers' money? What training could possibly be necessary? Union officers need to be able to shout louder than the members and who really cares what they shout? Many members, against striking, are overruled in the majority of instances, so what else do union officers need to be trained for?

Surely this is just another marvellous way to aid in the government's so-called anti inflationary bill. I presume we may now look forward to bigger and longer strikes and more of them.

Perhaps it will afford another manner in which the Liberal government will win votes. After all, labour members are important voters.

Mainland students at Driftwood

It was an invasion. On Thursday morning about 35 students from York House School in Vancouver were on Salt Spring Island. All 35 took time out to visit and inspect the operation at Driftwood.

For an hour or so the production of the paper came to a standstill as the interested students were introduced to the intricacies of offset printing and learned the difference between the two basic methods of producing newspapers.

The visit had been arranged in advance.

read; "would you use open-air markets in the summer-time?

Although the response to the questionaire was disappointing.. 90 returns from the Ganges area and 188 returns from the remainder of the island...the committee was left in no doubt about public interest in open-air mar-kets. Total of 78.3% of people in the Ganges area and 86.0% outside indicated they would 'use' a market: 15.7% in the Ganges area said 'no' 11.3% outside also said 'no'. Remaining 6.0% in the Ganges area and 2.7% outside held no opinion.

I bring these figures to your attention because of the survey now being undertaken by Driftwood.

The questionnaire of April did not make reference to a particular place for the market. It was felt that should there be a demand for an open-air market its location should be found after taking into consideration such factors as traffic and parking, the form the village might take, landscaping and the character which belongs to a seaside village set in superb surround-

The 'Ganges Plan' is now in its final stages and before long will be presented to the public for their consideration.

It is indeed unfortunate that at this juncture the Farmers' Market has entered the public arena with such energy and agony. It seems sad that our ideas and ideals could not have been directed towards the making of a plan for the village of Ganges so that we might have set new standards in the art of shopping and the creation of a place for people to meet and exchange the time of day.

CHANGES TO PLAN

I feel the Salt Spring community should be alerted to the fact that the Regional District has taken two steps which will seriously weaken the Salt Spring Community Plan.
On April 27 the Regional District approved a land use contract allowing George Heinekey to construct a 26-unit apartment building in Vesuvius. This approval directly contravenes the Community Plan.

The Plan states that "higher density development will be permitted only when sewers are installed."

The authors of the Plan realized it would be many years before sewers would be installed Vesuvius and Fulford and their intention was that there be no apartment buildings in these communities until that time.

The issue is not only whether or not Vesuvius residents want an apartment building. If this contract is approved a precedent

Down Through The Years With Driftwood

FIFTEEN YEARS AGO

Much different from last year, the rain held off for the big Victoria Day Celebration held last Monday in Ganges. This yearly event, sponsored by the Fulford Hall Committee, was, as usual, filled with fun and frolic. The day was highlighted by a parade and the crowning of the May Queen, Miss Nancy Reynolds.

The Salt Spring "Salties" have continued their winning ways and are now considered one of the top powers in the Vancouver Island Softball League. Last Sunday, they knocked over the highly-rated Glenora team in two games played at the local field. The first game, a ten innings affair, was 6-5 and the second game was won 15-7. Ted Akerman, iron man of the pitching staff, won both games.

Jock and Lassie, and young King, three Border Collies belonging to Bill Evans, starred in a sheep herding and field role on Thursday, when the CBC TV cameras picked up the story on Salt Spring Island. Two TV trucks from Vancouver, in the charge of Pat Brennan, passed through the island, stopping at sheep farms on route. They were met and hosted by Norman Mouat, who is an expert in handling sheep and dogs.

A warning to pet owners: be careful where you leave your package of slug bait. Keep it out of reach of dogs!

At the week end, Mrs. Bud Day of Galiano, had been putting minute quantities of the pesticide around her garden, according to directions. She left the remainder of the package on a table in her back porch not quite out of reach of the family's big Newfoundland dog, Belle.

Within half an hour Belle died a very painful death.

On Sunday, May 21, with a full turn-out of members, Pender Island Golf Club's Handicap Tournament resulted in the following awards:

Low net score: Ted Bowerman and James Anderson, tied; 2, Max Allan.

A consolation prize was awarded to Mrs. Hope Jennens, of South Pender.

Lady Minto Hospital Board of management was named on Monday evening at the first board meeting since the annual elections.

Douglas Cavaye will continue to serve as chairman of the board with A.E. Pike as vicechairman and Harold Hoffman, secretary-treasurer. Members of the executive committee are Mr. Cavaye, Mr. Pike, E.A. Richardson, J.G. Reid and Mr. Hoffman.

Newcomers to Salt Spring Island resorts are Mr. and Mrs. John W. Lee.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee, with their five daughters, have come to the island from Williams Lake. They have acquired Blue Gables on St. Mary Lake, from Mr. and Mrs. D. Ryan.

FIVE YEARS AGO

It was a week of movement. Travel was the key word. When the Tsawwassen Queen sailed on Friday evening from Tsawwassen not even a pedestrian could get aboard. The vessel was full and prospective island travellers were obliged to travel to Swartz Bay and around Fulford Harbour.

The Salt Spring Queen was still full up on Saturday evening. Filled with youthful passengers all filled with the promise of a rock festival, the ferry left cars behind at 5.30 and 7.30 despite the aid of the Pender Queen.

It was the May 24 week end

It was the May 24 week end with a new style: a week end bringing record crowds to all the islands.

Premier WAC Bennett formally opened the new wing of Lady Minto Hospital Friday afternoon.

Before a crowd of about 300 people the premier formally declared the hospital open and ceremoniously unlocked the front door.

New Salt Spring Island airstrip was christened at the week end when the first plane came in, unheralded.

Project of Gordon Cudmore, the airstrip has aroused some opposition in the Fulford area. It lies at the head of Fulford Harbour, including the former Shaw farm property.

At the annual meeting of SPEC on Salt Spring Island last Tuesday, president Mike Larmour outlined the accomplishments of the year.

"It was a busy year," he reported. "We began some long-term projects, such as recycling and many other short-term projects."

Some of the year's activities were a clean-up day in Ganges, when two pickup loads of tin cans, bottles and paper were cleaned up.

A pickup of dangerous and persistent pesticides was organized. "We owe special thanks to Les Ramsey for his co-operation," added Mr. Larmour.

will have been set for granting exceptions to the Community Plan. Once this has happened the community will have no rational grounds on which to deny the "right" to build apartments in Ganges, Vesuvius or Fulford.

Subsequent applicants for land use contracts could justifiably point out that the rule had already been broken for someone else, so why not for them?

one else, so why not for them?

A hearing to consider the land use contract is scheduled for 1.30 pm Tuesday, May 31 in the Legion Hall. If the community wishes to protect the integrity of the Community Plan it must turn out to protest this proposal.

In addition the Regional District, at the same April 27 meeting, gave three readings to an amendment to the Community Plan. Part of this amendment will remove the above-mentioned provision requiring sewers for higher density development.

Regional Director Heinekey stated that the Regional District is no longer required to consult the community and has no plans to do so.

Fortunately, the Islands Trust has said it will hold a proper public meeting on the subject. Islanders will have to consider carefully if, and under what conditions they wish to remove this provision. However, until this decision can be made with proper public participation, permission to violate this provision of the Plan should not be granted.

AS SHE LIKES IT

When I read your and Joan Raeside's 'rave' notices of the "Wizard of Oz", I really thought I had taken leave of my senses. Luckily, before I had time to make an appointment with a psychiatrist, "As You Like It" restored my faith in school drama and in my own judgment.

Sentinel Satellite, an alternative high school class from Vancouver, presented a fresh and lively version of Shakespeare's comedy. It's many years since I saw "As You Like It", and I don't recall the music, but it could not have been better than the excellent quartet which accompanied the action on Saturday evening.

The sets were imaginative and simple, the costumes elaborate and traditional, and the players were confident and very much at home on the three-tiered stage. The audience was smaller than it should have been, but we made up in enthusiasm what we lacked in numbers. I hope the players were not disappointed in us. We were certainly enraptured by them.

We won't freeze in the dark!

An advertising campaign has been launched to persuade the public that unless the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline is built, Canadians in other parts of Canada are going to freeze in the dark.

It's ironical that the petrol-eum industry, which in 1973 was telling us that we had enough oil and gas to meet our needs for hundreds of years, should now claim that we are facing a gas shortage. The difference is that in 1973 they were asking for permits to export gas to the United States; now they want to build the Mackenzie Valley Pipe-

The indisputable fact is that we do not face a gas shortage. We are in serious trouble with regard to oil, but our proven reserves of natural gas are sufficient to meet Canadian needs for the next twenty-five

Last year alone more new gas reserves were found in Southern Alberta than all the proven gas reserves in the Mackenzie Delta.

Even if the Mackenzie Valley Pipeline were built it is unlikely that Canadians would get any of the gas from that area. In the first place most of that gas has already been contracted to American gas companies, and any surplus gas would be exported to the United States since the National Energy Board Act stipulates that all gas surplus to our needs can be exported.

At the present time three Canadian gas companies have applications before the National Energy Board asking for permits to export gas to the United States at the very time they are telling us we are running out of Canada produces two and a half trillion cubic feet of gas each

Of this amount we consume one and a half trillion cubic feet and export one trillion cubic feet to the United States. If the petroleum industry is afraid that Canadians will freeze in the dark why don't they suggest cutting back on our exports? But they

What they are proposing is that we sell our cheap gas to our American neighbours and someday buy Arctic gas at three times the price we are now paying.

This is why the New Democratic Party has suggested that if the Americans desperately need Alaskan gas it could be shipped by the Alcan route along the Alaskan highway which has less dangers with respect to the environmental damage or the social impact on our native

In this way we could save up to one trillion cubic feet a year which over a five year period would supply us with more gas than has been proven so far up in the Mackenzie Delta and at a much lower price.

in the Mackenzie Delta and techniques were developed to deliver it without any serious environmental and social consequences, then a line could be built to connect with the proposed Alcan pipeline when, and if, we need gas in addition to our southern reserves. But we do not need that gas now and we should not be stampeded into making a hasty and ill-considered decision merely to satisfy a group of American oil companies.

We have sufficient gas reserves to meet our needs for several years to come; we have sufficient time at our disposal to examine the various options open to us and then make our decision on the basis of what is best for the Canadian people.

It is for that reason we support Mr. Justice Berger's recommendation that there should be a ten-year delay before making a decision regarding the construction of a gas pipeline down the Mackenzie Valley. As Mr. Berger said in his report, "The risk is in Canada, the urgency is in the United States".

Glenn Blomly was fined $100 and put on probation for a year by Judge D.K. McAdam in Provincial Court last Wednesday after he pleaded guilty to a Court was told that at approximately 1 am Blomley had stopped at the fire hall to obtain water for his vehicle, which had become overheated. He had walked around the building and found an unlocked door through which he had entered and rendered one of the fire trucks inoperable by breaking off the key in the ignition. He had also torn out some of the wiring under the dash of the pump truck. Damage had been estimated at $77

In Provincial Court

Driver should take test and then challenge condition of machine

Stanley Shaughnessy, of Salt Spring Island, was fined $500 for refusing to take a breathalyzer test when he appeared before Judge D.K. McAdam in Ganges Provincial Court last Wednesday. He was found not guilty on a second charge of impaired Charges arose after Mr. Shaughnessy was pulled over at Ganges by RCMP on November 12 last year.

Mr. Shaughnessy had first appeared in Court on December

Phone 537-5550

1 and had pleaded not guilty to both charges.

Crown witness Constable Darrell Simmonds of the RCMP detachment at Ganges told the Court he had pulled Shaugh-nessy over after having followed him for three-quarters of a mile towards Fulford from Ganges.

He said the accused had crossed over the centre line twice in his GMC pickup and he stopped the vehicle.

Constable Simmonds said there was an odour of liquor in the truck and the accused had watery eyes and his speech was slurred. The police officer had then asked him to do two sobriety tests: he weaved a little doing the balance test but did not lose his balance. He lost his balance several times doing the step test. The officer subsequently took Mr. Shaughnessy to the police station for a breathalyzer test, believing him to be impaired. He refused twice to take the test upon arrival at the station.

NOT FUNCTIONING In his defence, Shaughnessy told the Court that a week prior to the incident, a man he had been working with had been granted a stay of proceedings because the breathalyzer machine was not functioning properly. Mr. Shaughnessy believed that "it wouldn't be a fair reading if the machine was not working properly", and had therefore refused to take the Crown witness, Sergeant Ray Stelter of Ganges, explained that the breathalyzer had not been working because it was in need of being cleaned. He had subsequently told one of the officers of the detachment to do the required cleaning. He also told the Court that there had been no functional problems with the machine on the night of Novem-

Witness for the defence, Dr. John Coombs, told the Court that he had given Mr. Shaughnessy an examination on March 14. He had found that Mr. Shaughnessy suffered from a disease that affected his ability to walk in a straight line. It only affected his ability to walk, he told the Court, and was caused by degeneration of some of the nerves in the legs.

In regard to Const. Simmonds' testimony that Shaughnessy's truck had twice crossed the centre line, Ganges mechanic Michael Valcourt said the truck belonging to the accused was in need of repairs. He said the steering wasn't tight because the vehicle needed new idler and Pitman arms.

In handing down his decision, Judge McAdam told Mr. Shaughnessy that any doubts he had about the breathalyzer could have been resolved in Court after taking a test. He also said that Shaughnessy had "no business operating a vehicle in such a condition" as that which his truck was in. But, he added, it was a "touch and go situation", and in such a case he could only find him not guilty of the impaired driving charge.

Racing dinghies is popular sport

This sailing dinghy couldn't heel over much further as it crosses a stretch of current.

BY JAMES A. MCVIE

Just about every community in British Columbia that has a navigable body of water also has its own brand of sailor. Sailors in every age group can be found launching their car-top dinghies, hoisting multicoloured nylon sails and playing the seasonal winds.

With one of every three families boat owners in the province, it is estimated there are 5,000 skippers of small sailing dinghies: Sabots, El Toro's, Mintos, Davidsons and Lasers. Big fleets of these eight to 12 foot (2.5 to 3.5 metre) boats are to be found racing in organized weekend schedules around coastal and interior yacht clubs.

Three fined

no return

While the major activities are centred in Vancouver, Victoria, Nanaimo, Duncan, Comox, Kelowna and Penticton, racing dinghies will be found wherever open water is available. Some areas have international regattas and championships, such as Elk Lake on Vancouver Island and in the Okanagan.

In all the organized events, a fleet of rescue boats stand by to pull the enthusiasts from the water and to tow overturned dingbier to sefetty.

dinghies to safety.

DINGHY DAREDEVILS

A rare breed of Dinghy Driving Daredevil has been developed on Vancouver Island, where, every mid-March, sailors from the Esquimalt Squadron of the Canadian Forces Sailing Association tackle the Gorge, dodging rocks and rapids from a starting point near their head-quarters to Victoria's Inner Harbour. The four-mile (6.5 kilometre) course heads along the Gorge, whose water flow is dominated by tide conditions making for an extremely active reversible waterfall.

Since 1970, when the first international fleet tackled the course, spectators have crammed the rails of the bridge across the Gorge and the surrounding banks to watch the sailing action. What they see confirms that racing the rapids in El Toro dinghies must be madness: the event must be the closest to unique in the world of race sailing.

Students in Quebec

Interexchange and the Canadian reality

CATHERINE CARTWRIGHT

Who are you? Who are we? This was the theme behind the recent "Exchange on Canadian Studies" held in Quebec

City.

The conference brought together more than 250 students from all over Canada, in addition to the 250 host students in Quebec City.

Each province and territory prepared a presentation reflecting their area. The B.C. delegation put together a presentation on Settlement Patterns and the Forest Industry

The presentations were held in a vocational high school and were totally bilingual as each participant was equipped with a transistorized translating kit.

The mornings were filled with presentations and our afternoons were occupied with tours of the city, including the Parliament and a walking tour of Old Quetec. On one afternoon a mini olympics was held. B.C. won the volleyball and came third in swimming, rowing and badminton.

Of course, the conference wasn't without its political side. Organized discussions involving minorities in Quebec and Ontario was the main topic area.

Our evenings were filled with activities such as folk dancing, a disco and a folk singer from New Brunswick. A great deal of enthusiasm was shown throughout the activities.

The conference ended with a banquet and dance. A great deal was learnt by all in addition to the experience of meeting people from all across Canada. I think we all realized that Canada is much more than our own region and each province and territory has its own unique characteristics.

The Canadian Legion and the Women's Auxiliary held their monthly meeting on Monday, May 16. Repairs to the bridge are completed and once over the bridge we found the Island as pastoral and serenely beautiful as always. We ended up at Bedwell Resort, where we had a chat with Mrs. Lorraine Dever, who will be operating the store this year with the assistance of Charlie and Mary Johnson of South Pender. At present they are only open on week-ends but once the boating season gets into full swing they will be open every day. There were several boats docked at the wharf and Daylene Dayziel who has moved to Bedwell from Port Washington to do the bookkeeping reports a brisk sale of fishing licenses. In charge of the day's program was Kevin Bell, newcomer to the island and newcomer to the Chamber of Commerce. He had accepted chairmanship of the project at his first meeting of the Chamber.

Among the floats, the Salt Spring Island firemen were warmly commended by the judges, who refrained from allocating a specific award to "give others some encouragement".

Top commercial entry was adjudged that of Harbour's End Marina.

First in the organization was the Sailing Club and top humorous entry was Gulfstream with Pat Baines thoroughly washing himself along the parade route. Mouat's entry was awarded the costume prize, with its storefull of pioneers.

Only one prize was offered in each class. Judges were Mrs. Al Black, Phil Valcourt and Frank Richards.

Sunflower Hogan won the children's prize with her goat, who also walked the entire distance. Judges expressed difficulty in making a choice as well as regret at the fact that the choices were limited, without second prizes in any class. The Alternative Circus was given a warm commendation for humour and originality.

The day's program was a community effort and included businessmen and others. Steve Nelson kept an eye on the day's events as only a former May Day chairman would.
