Art fit for Easter

Melitta Kandler surrounds herself with delicately-detailed, handmade egg creations. Born in the Ukraine, Kandler says the egg art has been passed down through the generations. The process — which needs a steady hand, creative mind, beeswax and dyes — takes about four hours to complete. Each of the finished eggs tells its own story and offers a visual delight.

Holiday changes deadlines

The Driftwood office will close for a day and one advertising deadline will change this week for the first holiday weekend of the tourist season.

Driftwood staff will observe the Good Friday holiday with a day off. The display advertising deadline will move to 2 p.m. Thursday.

There will be no other deadline changes.

$70 million is ferries' good news: bad news is a stalled Option Three

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

As B.C. Ferries waited for a multi-million-dollar infusion from Tuesday's provincial budget, the southern-Gulf-Islands stakeholder group searched for cures to its ailing schedule.

Minister of Ferries Gordon Wilson announced last week that the corporation would get $70 million from the provincial government.

"I think that figure will end up about $10 million less than announced," Tony Cox, Wilson's executive assistant, said Tuesday. "The information contained in the budget will show that (the cash) will come from gas taxes."

That means B.C. Ferries will receive about $70,000 per-route-mile, slightly less than the hoped-for $95,000 given each year to the Ministry of Highways.

Cox could not say if the budget item would be an annual one for the ferry corporation.

The capital injection came at a time when B.C. Ferries had almost ground to a standstill due to union demands and executive turnover.

The turmoil hit the Southern Gulf Islands Ferry Advisory Committee (SGIFAC) hard and caused the shelving of its pet project — Option Three.

Sparks fire up library debate

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

Controversy about the Salt Spring Public Library board and its strategic planning committee is circulating as fast as the best-sellers in the library's collection.

While regional director Kellie Booth last week confirmed the Capital Regional District (CRD) would provide $12,000 to fund a long-term plan now being worked on by the committee, she clearly had concerns about the process so far.

In a detailed letter to the board, Booth was critical of "unilateral direction" given to the committee by the library board and said the committee "does not have representation from a wide spectrum of the community as I had requested in my correspondence . . ."

The "unilateral direction" refers to part of the committee's mandate given to it by the board — "to maintain the philosophy of a volunteer library and an autonomous library association" — as well as what Booth describes as "the resolve of the board and committee to move toward referendum . . . prior to the public having an opportunity to express its wishes in this regard."

The "dismissal" of the only non-library-connected committee member, Gerry Kreutzer, was also cited as "highly irregular."

(Committee member Stanley Shapiro was not "library-connected" when Booth wrote her letter but was elected to its board last week.)

A perception that the committee has its eyes solely on property taxation as the salvation of its financial problems also concerns Booth.

As an example, she said, the library board is aware of a federal grant program which would help with computer upgrading, but has not yet pursued it.

She also pointed to the library association's $73,000 building fund, suggesting its relevance be considered "in light of recent government policy changes no longer permitting library associations to purchase or lease property. . .

She said the public should be informed of plans for the building fund, and a back-up financial plan needs to be developed in case a tax referendum does not pass.

Library board chairwoman Grace Byrne said Monday that some of Booth's concerns were the result of "misinterpretations," and replied to them in writing.

She said the directives about a "volunteer library" and "autonomous association" were "basic building blocks to the planning process. If these concepts should be firmly rejected when surveying the community, then, of course, we would need to alter our directions." Regarding the assumption of tax support, she said the survey results (now being tabulated by a Lower Mainland company) "will be highly indicative of community support."

Byrne maintained the committee's membership is "a broadly-based group with disparate opinions," despite their connections to the library.

On the decision to dismiss

Kreutzer, Byrne said, "It is our understanding that Mr. Kreutzer offered twice to the chairman (Richard Moses) that he was prepared to step down from the committee if the chairman wished. We understand that because Mr. Kreutzer appeared to be having a problem accepting the committee's deliberations and directives the chairman decided to accept (his) offer. . ."

Byrne said the library board is looking into the federal government program and that a member of the strategic planning committee has the job of researching alternative funding methods.

"We're sure it will be thoroughly done. We note, however, that solid base funding is needed. We have yet to hear of an ongoing guaranteed yearly fund outside the tax base. User-pay is not permitted under the Library Act."

Expansion or movement of the library will be necessary in five years, said Byrne. "If provincial policy prevents us from purchasing or leasing land, we would be able to expand on our present site. This fund is a small start towards that expected growth."

If a referendum fails, added Byrne, the association could "drain its building fund and slowly deteriorate into a reading room with few new books added to our collection"; or it could join the Vancouver Island Regional Library, which would "requisition taxes unilaterally with no referendum," estimated at about $29 per capita.

Booth made her letter public after it was not discussed at the library's annual general meeting last week, as she had requested. Byrne said the board had not had a chance to discuss the letter at that point and the AGM was not the place to get into it without the proper background.

Helen Keys is Booth's liaison person to the committee, with Tony Hume being Keys' alternate.

When the library association last summer asked Booth to consider having the CRD requisition property tax funds to support the library, she declined. However, she said, that could be considered if a long-term plan for services and finances was created.

The plan should be completed for board consumption by mid-May.

equivalency (funding) that was scrapped," said Neville Atkinson, co-chair of SGIFAC. "Now maybe we can get on with real solutions to the corporation's problems."

Option Three — which was to revamp the area's ferry schedules this summer — was put on hold by the corporation last week, a victim of limited vessel availability and union opposition.

The SGIFAC scheduling committee met Tuesday morning in a desperate attempt to salvage some vital changes to tourist-season operations.

With few options available, the committee's top priority was to adjust Friday night's late sailing from Tsawwassen to Long Harbour and its 11:50 p.m. arrival. "Absurdly late, for tourists, for anyone," Atkinson said. "Because no redeployment is possible, we can only tweak what we've got. And that is only a bandaid approach."

"I would hope that with the (budget) money, a capital-construction program is the first thing they look at."

The SGIFAC has written to ferry CEO Bob Lingwood asking for a meeting to complain, although nothing is likely to happen until the ferryworkers' union votes on its collective bargaining agreement April 15.

'Report card' improves

Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS) rated slightly better in the Fraser Institute's annual high school "report card" this year, but locals still consider it a document of relatively minor importance.

Based solely on four factors stemming from provincial exam results and the school's graduation rate, GISS received a score of 6 out of 10, up from last year's 5.4. It ranked in 154th spot among 262 high schools.

Prince of Wales Secondary in Vancouver and St. Thomas Aquinas school in North Vancouver were the top two schools, achieving perfect scores.

GISS principal Nancy Macdonald said she was happy to see the improvement, not just from last year but most previous years. However, she stressed, the report is a "very, very restrictive evaluation of schools."

The rating does not consider the content of or performance in elective courses, career preparation programs or even the number of provincial scholarship winners. (GISS had 11 such winners last year.)

"(The report card) unfortunately can be misleading to people who don't understand the nature of the Fraser Institute and the other things schools do besides prepare for provincial exams."

This doesn't mean the rating has no relevance, she said, and if GISS' rating was declining, she would be concerned.

The institute is a Vancouver-based right-wing organization which researches economic and social issues.

Treefrog Daycare loses phone in Sunday theft

The culprits broke a window and a door to gain entry to the south Salt Spring daycare.

The phone is valued at $150.

Anyone with information is asked to contact the local RCMP or Crime Stoppers.

• A sign reported stolen Sunday from Dairy Queen was found the following day at Portlock Park.

Smoking enforcement shifted to pub owners

The CRD has won the anti-smoking war.

By shifting responsibility for smoking prohibition in pubs onto the owners, the regional district has brought out a stick big enough to enforce its no-smoking bylaw.

Prior to last Wednesday, the CRD was responsible for monitoring smoking in pubs. Now owners must make sure no one smokes in their establishments or face fines of up to $1,000 per day.

"In December they changed health permits from annually to once every three months. If you have an outstanding ticket, you don't get a health permit, which means they can ruin your business," said Shelly Vermeulen, owner of the Vesuvius Inn. "This has never been about stopping smoking, it's about government control."

Vermeulen said she is spending $15,000 on outdoor facilities for her smoking patrons, but added that the smoking bylaw is now old news.

Proposed liquor law changes will allow restaurants to serve alcohol without food and to install big-screen entertainment.

"I can't help getting the feeling that (the CRD) is trying to annihilate pubs," she said.

Crime Stoppers and the Salt Spring RCMP are appealing to the public for help in solving a break and enter offence at the north end of the island.

In the early hours of Wednesday, March 3, perpetrators attempted to break into a house on McGill Road.

It appears the offenders were interrupted before they entered the house or stole anything.

They did gain entry to a locked storage building but did not take any of the contents.

Police say this is the second incident of its type to occur at the north end of Salt Spring in the past month.

They encourage residents to report any suspicious people, vehicles or incidents.

Anyone with information should contact Crime Stoppers at 386-8477 (TIPS) or call toll-free at 1-800-665-8477.

Firefighters respond to carbon monoxide alert

A carbon-monoxide-detector alarm brought Salt Spring's fire department to a Park Drive home Saturday.

While there was no apparent reason for the alarm to go off, the house's resident was taken to hospital as a precautionary measure.

Sunday night the department was called to a motor vehicle accident on Fulford-Ganges Road.

A car had hit a tree, but no one was around when firefighters arrived.

Computers, finances discussed, but library future tops agenda

While last Wednesday's Salt Spring Public Library Association annual meeting officially reviewed the previous year, members were eager to discuss a pivotal coming year.

What will come out of a long-range library plan now being developed and what it will mean for library volunteers and taxpayers headed the list of questions directed at the library board.

The issue of how much money the association needs to operate and whether it should come from property tax dollars was raised. However, as the board explained, until the strategic planning committee has completed its work, financial questions cannot be accurately answered.

Some people wondered why the committee was even investigating joining the Vancouver Island Regional Library System (VIRLS) when that would mean volunteers could not be used.

Committee chairman Richard Moses and others said information on all possibilities had to be available since the option of joining VIRLS would likely be raised at some point.

The meeting was reminded that "maintaining the philosophy of a volunteer library and an autonomous library association" was a directive given to the committee by the board, although that has been questioned in a letter from Capital Regional District director Kellie Booth. (See separate story.)

Moses reported that 650 public input questionnaires were completed, with 320 coming from the telephone surveys conducted by volunteers, 215 from newspapers and 115 from library users and staff. Data is now being tabulated.

Moses said the report should be received by the library board by mid-May, with public release and meetings held later.

Computer upgrading is another big issue for the association, affecting day-to-day operations and finances. Steve Grayson, board member in charge of the system, reported on the not-too-stellar state of the library's aging computers, which cannot accommodate newer software. People complain about limited search capabilities, but until newer computers are purchased, there can be no improvement. However, the cost is prohibitive at this point, said Grayson.

This year's computer budget of $10,000 should cover 100 hours of computer consulting time at $35 per hour, two new computers, a scanner and some new hardware, he said.

In 1998 the association's income was $71,361, with expenses of $58,124.

A fund earmarked for a future new building holds $73,000.

Treasurer Michael Wheaton explained that the association was in the same financial position as the previous year, with the lack of provincial per-capita grant almost made up by a CRD grant-in-aid and matching provincial funds.

Statistics compiled from Library Services Branch data and presented at the AGM showed that Salt Spring's library operates on far less money than other B.C. libraries. In 1997, average per-library income was $158,540, compared to $83,444 on Salt Spring.

Libraries in communities with similar populations had much higher income. Examples are Smithers, $139,238; Grand Forks, $252,864; and Sechelt, $353,353.

On Salt Spring, 56 per cent of funds were spent on books and materials, compared to an average 14 per cent across B.C. Due to higher total budgets, actual amounts spent on books and materials in other libraries of similar size was generally higher than on Salt Spring.

145 library volunteers give 14,500 hours

People make Canada's largest volunteer library go around.

Last year Mary Hawkins Memorial Library had 145 volunteers who put in 14,500 hours of time.

Its 4,500 card holders took out an average of 23.7 items for a total of 107,000.

Salt Spring's library board gained a new face last Wednesday when Stanley Shapiro was elected by acclamation.

Shapiro has a Ph.D. in marketing and has been a professor at Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania, and taught at McGill, SFU and UVic.

Two members appointed after the resignations of Jennifer Quick and Bob Davidson last year were confirmed on the board at the AGM. They are Richard Moses and Steve Grayson.

Other board members are chairwoman Grace Byrne, Michael Wheaton, Mary Walker, Jill Evans and Norma Keech.

Library members also voted to appoint Karen Dakin for auditing of the books for the next fiscal year, upon recommendation of Wheaton, the board's treasurer.

Rules make market a 'mellow' event

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

It has been years since there was a fistfight at Centennial Park's Saturday Market.

Turf disputes were once common in the early morning as locals and off-islanders staked claim to a limited number of vendor spots.

Things are mellow these days, but as the new season opens this weekend, space will again be at a premium.

"I get a sense that demand will be heavy because I've had at least 40 calls since January from people who want to sell but haven't been there before," says market coordinator Jennifer Demery. "One thing for sure, things will be tight."

This is good news, sort of.

Although the market is rarely the main reason for a trip to Salt Spring, it is a Saturday ritual for most visitors.

It also generates an increasing slice of local revenues and helps keep the island's arts-and-crafts reputation vibrant.

But the market's class structure has always been a hot potato.

Which is why Demery, along with assistants Matthew Coleman and Brenda Anderson, have been asked to make the market rules as equitable as possible.

The main issue is rental costs but an important one is seniority among the day vendors, Demery explains.

"Basically the longer you have been there, the better space you get. This gets more important the more people want to sell."

While the system is still under construction, many feel it is much better than even 10 years ago — when it was first-come, first-served and off-islanders could find their tents floating in Ganges Harbour early Saturday morning.

"I tried it for a few months back then and it wasn't a pleasant atmosphere," says stained-glass artisan Melanie Dick.

"When I went back full-time last year it was totally different. Most of the tension was gone and the system seemed to work well."

Along the park's frontage there are 75 seasonal spots, all occupied by longtime island vendors.

Day and produce sellers are assigned spots along the Gasoline Alley side, with preference going to locals over off-islanders.

Their numbers can vary from about 30 to more than 90 and often with demand exceeding even that.

Day sellers now have their own representative on the market advisory committee.

There is often a natural winnowing out as enforcement of the basic market law — make it, bake it or grow it — eliminates some vendors.

Last year a tarot-card reader was denied space because she didn't fit the criteria and coordinators say they always find some products with discrete "Made In China" or "Made in Thailand" tags.

"These rules are what keeps the market high-quality," says Demery. "I think it is also what keeps (consumers) coming back year after year."

She notes there are plans by a private individual to rent Central Hall on Saturdays to use as a flea market.

Rental costs at Centennial Park are $65 plus $1 per frontage foot for seasonal sellers and $4 plus $1 a foot for daily entrants.

These are slightly lower than most local markets in the CRD.

Yet the market committee — run by PARC — does generate a profit which this year will be used to hire a full-time custodian for the park.

Demery would also like to earmark some funds for scheduling more musical entertainment in the park's bandshell.

There are, however, ongoing problems to be worked out.

Parking in Gasoline Alley remains a bitter dispute between vendors and retail merchants.

And the presence of dogs in the park is an issue still under discussion by PARC commissioners.

Further information on the market can be obtained from the PARC office at 537-4448.

The Fulford Market, held Sundays in the area adjacent to the Fulford Inn, is also set to kick off its season this weekend.

Information can be obtained from Evan at 653-4591.

MARKET SLOGAN: As vendors prepare for this weekend's opening of the Saturday market in Centennial Park, Brenda Anderson, left, Jennifer Demery and Matthew Coleman offer a reminder of the types of goods vendors can sell.

CHR head discusses health issues

Problems created by early hospital discharges was one of the local issues addressed during a recent visit by the Capital Health Region's chief executive officer.

Further issues discussed by Tom Closson and the Southern Gulf Islands Community Health Advisory Committee included funding for the ambulance service on Saturna Island, the Gulf Islands' heavy reliance on volunteers, and the ongoing facility review at Greenwoods.

"Closson recognized the unique difficulties which islanders experience in accessing services due to geographic isolation," stated an advisory committee release.

"But (he) also noted that an advantage of our small size is the close working relationship of our various health professionals."

Closson further discussed the regional shortage of long-term care beds, noting this creates problems for patients awaiting placement and results in hospital bottlenecks when these patients occupy acute care beds.

Working to resolve this issue is a high priority, he said.

Closson also expressed a willingness to travel to each of the Gulf Islands to meet with various health groups.

In other health advisory committee news:

- Discussions continue between Dr. Ernie Higgs, regional director of medical administration in the CHR, and Outer Islands representatives regarding a contract system of remuneration for physicians.

It is hoped the new plan will be in place within the next month.

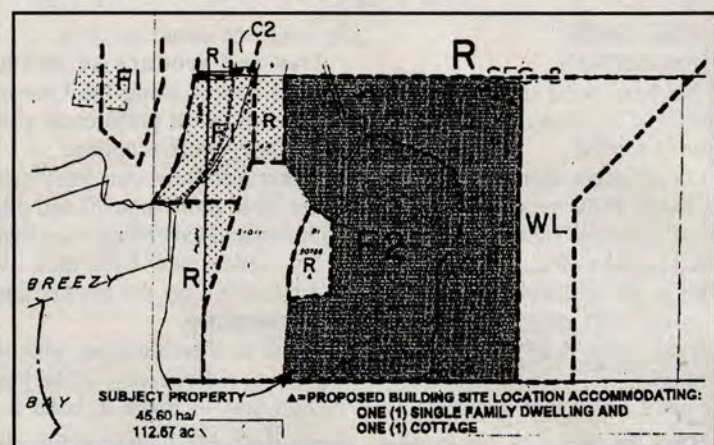

- Several advisory committee members have agreed to serve as members for the new Southern Gulf Islands Home Support Services board.

The board will meet in Saanich following the advisory committee's monthly meetings.

This application is made in conjunction with a Forest Land Reserve (FLR) inclusion proposal for Block 4, Plan 775, Malahat L.D. comprised of approximately 49.8 hectares (123 acres) and located on Vancouver Island.

New rules coming for transfer station operators

With jurisdiction for garbage being downloaded onto the Capital Regional District (CRD) by the province, Salt Spring operators are facing a new set of rules and regulations.

Changes will affect where and how garbage transfer stations can operate.

(Transfer stations are where recyclables and waste are separated and transferred for shipment to landfills.)

Garbage has long been an arms-length issue on Salt Spring. Residents voted down a publicly-funded transfer station in a 1989 referendum, the Blackburn Road landfill was closed by environment ministry order in 1991 and since then garbage collectors have been more or less unregulated.

Last fall the Ministry of the Environment passed Bill 17 which moved responsibility for all waste matters over to local regional districts.

"Too many matters were going unresolved, such as sanitary abuses," says local CRD director Kellie Booth. "This seemed to be the best way to deal with public and private concerns."

"Salt Spring didn't want public funds paying for transfer stations so Bill 17 presents the opportunity for private enterprise to do it."

The goal of any new regulatory system is to force operators to follow environmental guidelines for moving trash off Salt Spring, such as the control of toxic leaching, smell control and aesthetic siting.

This means that transfer stations will be licensed by the CRD.

The where, how and who will be the subject of an eight-month public process that should start in the near future.

"We've met with the three operators here and they agreed it was a good idea," says Booth. "Now it is up to us to come up with our own recipe for regulations."

Booth notes the prime criteria for any site will depend on Islands Trust zoning, a condition that could create problems for Salt Spring Garbage Service, which currently operates in watershed land on the former Blackburn Road dump site.

Island Garbage Express is about to move its transfer operations from its current agricultural-zoned site to an industrial site between Beddis and Fulford-Ganges roads.

"We are a bit concerned because we don't have proper sorting facilities on the new site so we're not sure what our operations will be," says Cheryl North of Island Garbage Express.

The third local operator, Laurie Hedger, could not be contacted for comment.

Operators will also have to face financial issues. Booth says that any transfer station licence will require a company to post a performance bond, a commitment at least one local operator says it can't afford.

Also, government specifications for station construction could cost hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"We're just starting the whole process and we expect a great deal of public input," says Booth. "There are some issues that are more important than others but I think the whole question highlights the type of problems a community can face when it doesn't have a (municipal) government."

Core Inn lines up stack of new youth programs

After successful renovations, the Core Inn is all dressed up and ready to go forward with snazzy new programs.

Activities set up so far are a board games afternoon featuring mah jongg; yin-yang yoga; arts and crafts classes; Stagecoach Theatre School; film nights; the Homework Club; and a dance with music by a local, high-energy rock band. Some are running now and others begin later this spring.

As Core Inn programs coordinator Trish Nobile says, anyone — youth or adult — with more ideas about what could be offered at the McPhillips Avenue centre is encouraged to contact her.

She said the youth project has discovered that youth prefer having activities in place at the centre, rather than it being used simply for drop-in purposes.

So now, thanks to community volunteers, the board games come out on Thursday afternoons from 2:30 to 5 p.m., with "lessons" being given in the ancient and extremely fun Chinese game of mah jongg.

Also on Thursdays beginning April 22, yin-yang yoga for youth is offered from 3 to 4:30 p.m. on the building's second floor.

Shilo Zylbergold is providing free professional tutoring via the Homework Club on Wednesdays from 3 to 4:30 p.m. It also takes place on the second floor.

The first Stagecoach program proposed by Simon Henson is a six-week program where the script of Alice in Wonderland will be workshopped. It begins on April 20 from 3-5 p.m. and continues for five more Tuesday afternoons.

In longer courses beginning in September '99 and January 2000, all aspects of creating a theatre production will be explored. Visiting instructors and off-island field trips will assist as the group gathers all the skills it needs to present Alice in Wonderland at ArtSpring next April.

Stagecoach enrolment is limited to 15 students aged 12 to 18.

Anyone wanting more information or to register can call Henson at 537-9761.

Still on an arts and entertainment theme, Hybrid, a "grunge" rock band which has been using the Core Inn for rehearsing, will perform at a dance in early May. Nobile says the arrangement has been mutually beneficial, with band members James Nicol, Dave Carson, Virgil Argo and Cody Dodds exchanging their labour for rehearsal space. Another major development is the possibility that "Phoenix High," an alternative high school, will be set up at the Core Inn. Anyone wanting more details about this proposal can call Catherine Derr 537-1762, or Nobile at 537-4167.

While lots is happening at the youth centre, there is still room for more activities and any community group can rent space. Again, Nobile is the contact person.

Four years later and still no plan

Does anyone remember the fanfare with which the B.C. Ferry Corporation announced a new era in transportation planning? Four years ago last December, then-B.C. Ferries CEO Frank Rhodes told the Islands Trust Council that the challenge of developing more efficient service in the Gulf Islands would be addressed by a new stakeholder group.

The Southern Gulf Islands Ferry Advisory Committee would take a year and a half to develop a plan that would map out whatever new terminals and vessels would be required for the future.

Today it's almost laughable to look back at the hype that surrounded Rhodes' announcement. But there's little to laugh about because there's still no plan.

Last week, the ferry corporation shelved the option developed by that committee, essentially throwing away four years of work. It wasn't a perfect plan and it didn't have the support of ferry workers, but it delivered a level of service that was acceptable to islanders at a cost that was supposedly acceptable to the ferry corporation, through its representatives on the committee.

The plan's biggest shortcoming was that it failed to meet the original expectations. It didn't call for the construction of new ferries; it simply redeployed existing vessels and crews in an effort to make the best of what we've got.

Last Monday B.C. Ferries scotched the plan, offering neither a replacement nor a suitable explanation. Ferry transportation planning, it would appear, will once again be conducted within the corridors of power in Victoria.

The volunteers on the advisory committee, meanwhile, seem determined to carry on. We admire their tenacity. Under the circumstances, we would expect them to resign their posts and spend their time on projects with more promise.

So what can they possibly do? A good start might be to press for an early meeting with the new ferries minister, Gordon Wilson, for we suspect he knows the reasons for shelving the committee's preferred option. The committee deserves an explanation as well as some indication from the minister himself whether its members are wasting their time or not.

Its members must also impress upon the minister the original purpose of their deliberations: long-range planning.

The minister knows more ships are required. His problem is finding the money to build them.

The committee's problem is to develop a route structure and a list of ships required to service those routes. It is a problem best left in the hands of people who live in the islands and use the ferries regularly, in close consultation and cooperation with B.C. Ferries representatives.

That's how the committee was designed to work. Its members appear ready to attempt to continue the job; it's up to the minister to give the word.

Healthy island communities — from both a social and economic standpoint — require efficient transportation systems. Our future health is in the minister's hands.

Kudos to Dick Harris

You have to admire the staying power of people like Dick Harris. The Member of Parliament for Prince George-Bulkley Valley has not allowed our dysfunctional system of government to deter him from carrying on his crusade against drunk driving.

Harris first used a private member's bill to try to bring in tougher penalties for drivers convicted of driving while impaired. It went the way of most such bills, proving yet again that sending MPs to Ottawa is a futile exercise.

But Harris wasn't prepared to abandon his cause. As he wrote in these pages two weeks ago, he introduced a private member's motion on the issue. Liberal MPs, ever-anxious to be seen to be doing the right thing, supported Harris' motion because it required little constructive action on the government's part.

Nothing, of course, came of it, until Harris reintroduced it as an opposition supply day motion, which directed the Commons justice committee to address the issue. The British Columbia MP's staying power paid off and the motion passed.

Despite delays since then, changes might well come about through legislation being introduced this year.

We're lucky to have MPs determined to make a positive contribution to the government of their country. We're not so lucky to have a system of government that places obstacles at every step of the way.

Envisioning a million dollars

By TOM VARZELIOTIS

What is a million dollars?

C.D. Howe posed the question to incite people to place the mysterious million dollars in the proper perspective.

Howe, a minister in MacKenzie King's cabinet, asked this question because he got irked by the failure of citizens to comprehend financial matters at the government level.

Not a bad question considering that most of us will never make personal contact with that much money.

The frequency of the question has diminished with inflation, yet it does pop up often enough to annoy politicians. Indeed the need to ponder Howe's question remains topical. It is of lasting significance.

Glen Clark decided to make us ride aluminum catamarans across the Strait of Georgia and by now the price of doing so, exorbitant as it was to start with by comparison to steel uni-hull vessels, has doubled to $430 million.

Jean Chretien now buys submarines that Brian Mulroney got rid of some time ago. And if the price was not burdensome enough, admirals want to spend more millions on torpedoes — as if the torpedoes currently on board are not deadly enough.

To upgrade the deadliness of our 60 CF-18 fighters, Chretien wants to spend $1.2 billion. The Nisga'a Treaty will cost more than $1 billion. What is a million?

Howe's question rests permanently in my mind. Respect for a million dollars was drilled into my brain by my professors at the University of Athens.

Engineers spend big, big money. But unlike politicians who are anointed with immense wisdom upon entering politics, engineers must learn how to spend money.

Moreover, engineers are forced to answer for their decisions, while politicians just walk away from the messes they create, like Mulroney did and Clark is about to do.

Engineering is the science of building to satisfy needs, including needs beyond mere functionality, at the minimum cost possible. This definition often contrasts the politician's concern about creating jobs and goes against the grain of the labour unions' struggles to do everything at the maximum cost possible.

Although mindful of other concerns, I remain dedicated to efficiency, designing at the minimum cost for any result.

My obsession with efficiency is sustained solely by my laziness. I may be lazy, but I am human.

I hate alarms, the inhuman devices that transfer us cruelly from the arms of Morpheus to the transit system for delivery to our bosses. I see leisure as the ultimate pursuit in life; bar none. Then, creating employment by producing waste, amounts to destruction of leisure, and it is accordingly abhorrent to me.

In one instance I figured I could save $2.5 million by altering the original design of a project: this at a time when a skilled worker made about $250,000 in his lifetime. While some saw it as destroying 10 lifetimes, I saw it as saving 10 men from a lifetime of hard labour.

I agonized over the engineering aspects of the matter and, when fully satisfied with the safety aspects of the design and the performance of the works, I made sure that the project did not go over budget.

I regret that the money I helped society save, the leisure I rescued, was metamorphosed by politicians into unemployment.

Clark's Pussyfats folly will cost us money, perhaps $200 million more than if the decision on the type of ferries had been left to marine architects instead of politicians such as Clark, a union organizer with less marine experience than a Swiss alpenhorn player.

Because a skilled worker now makes about $1.5 million during a lifetime of work, Clark's folly amounts to sentencing 130 British Columbians to hard labour for life.

And it will take some 600 Canadians labouring entire lifetimes to the billion-dollar price tag of Clark's and Jane Stewart's Nisga'a Treaty.

That is what a million dollars is. This I know.

What I do not know is how to make those responsible for the Pacificat ferries, the Pearson Airport sale, the Kim Campbell-Jean Chretien 1993 helicopter election games, the submarine torpedo deal and countless other large and small follies pay for their dishonesty and foolishness.

Firing one advisor won't do the trick

VICTORIA — So Premier Glen Clark thinks firing Adrian Dix, his long-time friend and close advisor will restore public trust in his government. It won't. Trust me.

"We have to build a team with credibility," said the premier when he announced that Dix was canned. "There need to be changes to improve communications with the media, caucus and the public," he added.

That was about the frame of mind Hitler was in when he fired Hermann Goering, the Luftwaffe chief, a few days before the Russians stormed his bunker in Berlin.

Dix was no doubt part of the problem — a small part — the government now faces, but feeding him to the wolves is neither fair nor will it change anything.

The root cause of public mistrust of this government is that through people such as Dix, it has manipulated the media, the public and its own caucus for so long that it has lost the ability to differentiate between reality and propaganda.

Every move this government makes is calculated for maximum publicity effect. Press conferences are staged to suit whatever outlet the spin doctors believe will give them the most bang for the buck.

Constant polling is to give the government an idea of what people want. Focus groups try on potential legislation. Millions of dollars are spent on massaging the public.

The Clark government has turned spin doctoring into a growth industry. Not only does every ministry have its own information section, but a vast central army of hacks control every word that reaches the public, from press releases to ministry brochures.

I have for some time maintained that governments are no longer destroyed by the opposition or the media, but by their own advisors.

Vander Zalm did an incredible job of bringing down the Social Credit Party, but he was greatly assisted by David Pool, his chief advisor.

Clark is so isolated from the real world by layers and layers of advisors that he has completely lost the ability to have his finger on the public pulse, which served him so well in opposition.

There have been ugly little power plays in his own office resulting in the dismissal or voluntary resignation of loyal staff and supporters, and the premier has either been unaware of the situation or was unwilling to do something about it.

At times it seemed that Clark was aware of the problem. He told me once that, perhaps, he was relying too much on Doug McArthur, then deputy minister in the premier's office.

Well, McArthur is gone, but Tom Gunton, another person Clark has blindly relied on, is still around. Gunton was identified by Auditor General George Morfitt as one of the people responsible for the 1996/97 budget fiasco.

A premier needs advisors, but he trusts them at his own risk. Advisors will essentially protect their own hide, and the best way to do that is to tell the boss that he's doing a great job. What a premier needs more than advisors is a good measure of common sense, and this premier seems to have lost that.

If Clark had any common sense, he would not have allowed the public relations blitz singing the praises of the Nisga'a Treaty. He would not have consented to the build-up of an army of spin doctors that could bring Slobodan Milosevic to his knees.

And if the premier doesn't trust the media to get the government's message across, he should look to his own shortcomings for a reason.

Firing Dix, who looked pretty shell-shocked when he talked to the media, just won't do the trick. Too many like Dix are still around.

If the premier really wanted to win back the trust of British Columbians, he might start by dealing honestly and candidly with the media and the public, without the dubious help of spin doctors.

Webb thanks

When we arrived on Salt Spring 24 years ago this April 1, we joked about being "April Fools" because we had pulled up stakes on the mainland to come here and prepare for a leisurely early retirement.

Instead we were welcomed by the community and became involved in many activities, both social and volunteer, which we both enjoyed.

Cec worked in the public and private sector, and made many friends among his colleagues and customers. Sadly, many of these predeceased him, but we had wonderful memories of those first dozen years.

However, the golden years were not too kind to him and he suffered many debilitating ailments, mostly without complaint, and he kept his good humour.

During those times he spent in hospital he enjoyed the cheerful care and attention of the doctors, nurses and staff. My thanks to Dr. Graham, Dr. "Bob," Jane and others too numerous to list.

My family and I appreciate the many cards and calls received during the past two weeks. The "island telegraph" certainly was in order! Cec would have been surprised and grateful to all of you, as am I.

The Salvation Army rated high at Atlanta's Olympic Games in 1996 by handing out free cups of cold water to needy spectators. Coca Cola donated the paper cups.

The Salvation Army planned to do the same in Winnipeg during this summer's Pan American Games. Perrier of Canada wants to stop them!

A sponsor of the games, Perrier will donate 700,000 bottles of water from France to the athletes — not the spectators. Frank de Vries, Perrier's president, is quoted as saying, "We're spending substantial amounts of money so support the games. We should at least have some opportunity to sell to customers."

I'm planning to increase my donation to the Salvation Army this year. I don't buy bottled water. But if ever I do, it won't be Perrier! MARY C. WILLIAMSON,

Destroy warheads

Surveys have indicated that some 90 per cent of Canadians are opposed to the military applications (at least) of nuclear power.

After having escaped the disasters of nuclear war through direct action of adversarial superpowers, we are now confronted by the possibilities of nuclear war by smart computers unable to comprehend Y2K. What a joke!

It would appear that the most assured corrective measure would be to separate the warheads from the computers before January 2000, and take our time destroying the warheads.

RAY AND VIRGINIA NEWMAN,

Too close

As my son-in-law John Campall found out as he got too close to ask his parrot, "Do you love me?", the parrot took a lunge and grabbed his nose, a real tug of war started as John tried to pull the parrot out of the cage, but the parrot tried to pull John into his cage.

After a lot of screaming, swearing and much laughter, he got free with a very bloody, sore nose, and the next few moments are indescribable.

John is a born Victorian from Vancouver Island who now lives in Albuquerque, New Mexico where he enjoys the sun and good life with his parrot.

Anyone with a parrot, take care, don't go too close.

Nuclear letters

If it doesn't seem safe to fly in an airplane or ride an elevator on January 1, 2000, how can it be safe to have 5,000 nuclear weapons at hair-trigger alert on that day?

Lloyd Axworthy and his standing committee on foreign aid and international trade (SCFAIT) wrote a courageous and sensible report called Canada and the Nuclear Challenge. It's about what Canada could do to promote nuclear sanity instead of nuclear proliferation. In the present political climate it is not unlikely that this remarkable report will get lost in the next political shuffle.

Please consider writing a letter to the prime minister with a copy to Lloyd Axworthy, congratulating them on the report and especially the fifth recommendation that Canada endorse the concept of de-alerting all nuclear forces subject to reciprocity and verification. This, in view of the instability in Eastern Europe and the looming computer difficulties at the end of this year (Y2K), appears eminently sensible.

Their address is: House of Commons Ottawa, ON, K1A 0A6 — no postage is required. Politicians do listen to public opinion.

We might just make the difference.

Brief beefs

It seems that as each year goes by I see more examples of our inhabitants making unreasonable demands of the island upon which we live. This week I have three brief beefs:

1) What's with the float planes on St. Mary Lake? I thought combustion-driven vehicles were banned on all Salt Spring freshwater reservoirs.

2) And how about the ongoing "improvements" to our cherished Ruckle Park? Did anyone ask for the new, sanitized barnyard area? Silly split-rail fences that go nowhere and serve no purpose except to make the park look like a south Surrey subdivision? And those dumb mounds of soil everywhere, carefully planted with shade-loving Oregon grape, salal and ferns that will wither in the sun and die by Victoria Day?

The whole project reeks of NDP chest-puffery, an idiotic make-work event and many dollars misspent.

3) Now we're trying to justify an airport in the Fulford Valley as a solution to floatplane congestion in Ganges Harbour? Sure, let's spread the unnecessary noise and pollution into the south end!

But it'll bring more tourist dollars to our economy, you say? Well, I've been running a B&B for nine years now, and of thousands of guests that have shared my breakfast table, a total of five have arrived by floatplane.

Not to knock our current air service; I consider it a wonderful luxury. And I agree that the ferry service ain't what it used to be, but to consider an airport as a sustainable solution to anticipated further cuts in ferry service is ridiculous.

Of course, that's only my opinion and counter-arguments are welcome.

Adventure and environment on screen at April film festival

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

Mixing environmental issues with extreme sports is something few would attempt, let alone succeed at.

In the third edition of their Green Extreme Film Festival, Jason Rody and Kerri Reid think they've finally found a reliable recipe.

The two-night, four-session event at Cinema Central April 9 and 10 will showcase documentaries that blend these themes flawlessly, such as the world's only close-up of high-performance women's surfing in Blue Crush or a lyrical biography of herbalist pioneer Juliette de Bairacli Levy.

"We didn't want to be overly issue-oriented because that can be a bit depressing," says Reid. "We tended to focus on subjects that will grab people's imaginations."

The festival offers 20 films during the two nights, ranging from a few minutes to an hour and a half; each session runs about two hours and offers between four and six movies.

"These are undoubtedly the best selections we've ever had," says Rody.

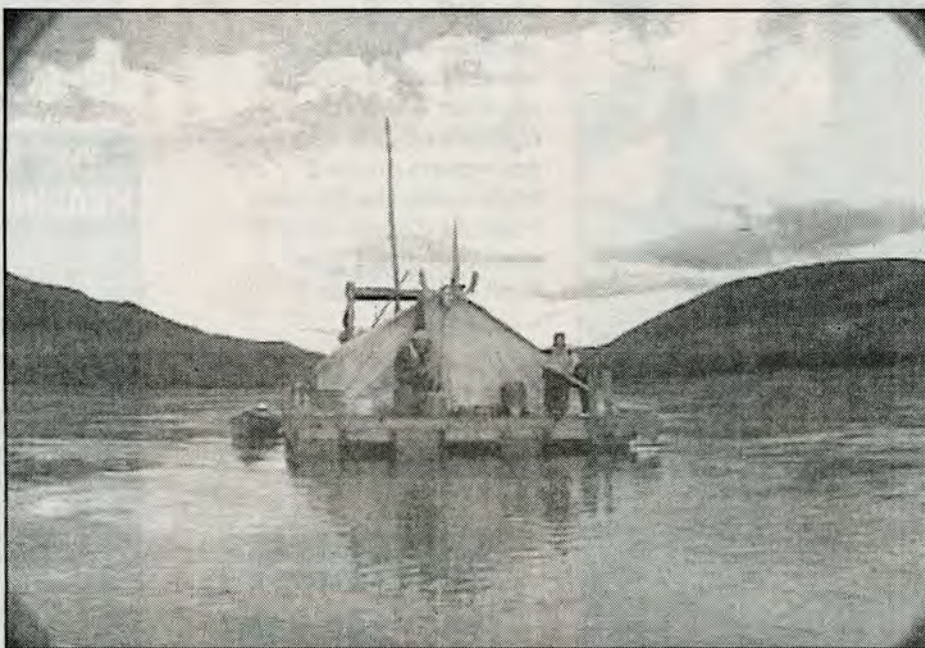

"I think both of us were amazed by how entertaining adventure and environmentalism can be when you put them together." The young partners held their first two festivals in Vancouver but brought it to Salt Spring when they moved here fulltime in 1998.

Rody, 27, a kayak guide with a film background, is intent on making it a community event that combines the island's most enduring idiosyncracies.

He feels it could become an obvious destination attraction — such as the Mountain Festival in Telluride, Colorado — as Salt Spring relies more and more on tourism.

But mostly the festival is a chance to push the boundaries of what entertainment can be.

"It isn't difficult to see the extreme aspects of snowboarding and surfing, but even the (two) animated films are great examples of an extreme environmentalism,"

BERING THROUGH: Six guys, a puppy and a raft are the focus of Yukonna, a documentary about a wild and woolly trip down the Yukon River from Whitehorse to the Bering Sea. The movie will be one of the highlights of the upcoming Green Extreme Film Festival April 9 and 10 at Cinema Central.

says Reid, 26, and a budding documentary filmmaker.

The Friday night sessions include films about an artificial avalanche, a unique take on a campaign to eradicate gophers in Alberta, an activist who lives in a threatened old-growth tree and an assault on Mount McKinley to increase breast-cancer awareness, narrated by Olympia Dukakis.

Also on the bill is the biography of de Bairacli Levy, Reid's favourite, and a gripping documentary by Lynn Clark on the dangers of white-water paddling.

The latter selection — also chosen as best-of-festival in Banff — is particularly poignant because, within months of its completion, Clark died in a white-water accident.

Rody and Reid decided to dedicate the festival to Clark and to Jack Palmer, the young son of friends who is convalescing in a California hospital after a heart transplant.

Saturday's sessions bring films about a land-use struggle in Los Angeles — featuring Martin Sheen — similar to the Burns Bog situation in Vancouver, masters-level surfing in Mexico, squatters in B.C. and a strange rafting trip down the Yukon River from Whitehorse to the Bering Sea.

The latter is Rody's pick of the crop.

"I travelled a bit with a couple of the filmmakers. They're nutty and you really get a sense of it in the film," he says.

The event's 20 offerings were selected from 50 applications. Salt Spring film scorer Bruce Ruddell and former cinema owner Louise Nye will judge the entrants on Saturday night.

Awards will go to the best overall film, best environmental film and best adventure film.

Prizes will come from the studio of longtime Salt Spring stained-glass artist Melanie Dick.

Festival tickets are $7 for each session or $10 for both sessions on one evening, and can be obtained with a list of the films at Volume II bookstore in Mouat's Mall.

Rody and Reid will take a three-hour version of the festival on the road to Victoria April 15 and to Vancouver April 20.

The pair is also in charge of programming for the annual Canadian Film Festival at Cinema Central in June.

PRETZEL MOTORS Ltd.

WHEN IS IT TIME TO CHANGE YOUR OIL?

What truly determines the effectiveness of motor oil is its additive package and the oil's ability to suspend contaminants.

To simplify the issue, the additive package in the oil prevents foaming, neutralizes acids of combustion, prevents deposits from building up in the engine, etc. The reason for suspending contaminants is to allow the oil filter to capture dirt and debris; this removes the larger contaminants that can damage your engine. Once the additives are consumed by doing their job, damage to the engine begins. The life expectancy of motor oil is based on the operating environment. Short trips, like the most of us do here on the island, cause moisture and contaminants to build up more quickly. We recommend to change the oil and filter every 5000 km or every three months to prevent an engine job in the near future.

Parents' hearts warmed despite blood-chilling wind

Salt Spring's mini league girls soccer season finished this weekend in a butt-clenching David-and-Goliath soccer tourney in Victoria.

The island sent four young girls teams, U8 to U11, to the event and, in most cases, Goliath sat on David.

For the adults, it was a time to reflect upon the true meaning of life as a soccer parent. Rule number one. No matter how sunny and spring-like it is elsewhere, the soccer field will be criss-crossed with blood-chilling winds able to penetrate five layers of clothing.

Luckily, as adults, the chance to watch seven little girls discover the meaning of teamwork heated up our insides.

Way back in October, these same girls kicked a soccer ball in their first practice game ever. They moved around the field in one gigantic clump. They fought fellow team members for the ball. They scored on their own goal keeper. They stopped to stick fingers up their noses. They picked the ball up with their hands.

But this weekend they jumped for only the second time into a tournament with Victoria-area girls who play regular league games. In their assortment of untucked shirts, dragging tear-aways and oversized soccer boots, they faced their opponents who donned satin shirts and matching socks; teams that averaged 14 players to our seven in the six-sided games.

The opponents were giant seven-year-olds fed on Devonshire cream and scones. Our team boasted a few size-challenged seven-year-olds, a couple of six-year-olds and a five-year-old.

And they did a fine job. Of course, we parents who have studied soccer techniques for years, helped.

"Look," I finally said to Danica, who last week fell off her bike and smacked her forehead on a rock. "Tilt your head up; make sure they see your black eye. It has to have a psychological impact. Try baring your teeth too."

In a post-game de-briefing, just before she fell asleep that night, Danica summed up the problem.

"We're used to playing on a smaller field — ours is usually only about a mile long . . . uh, how long is a mile?"

FAMILY MATTERS

WITH SUSAN LUNDY

"From about here to Cusheon Lake."

"Oh. About 15 centimetres, then?"

"No, that was the average height difference between Sierra and the other teams' players."

"15 kilograms?"

"Just under your team's average weight."

So, now that soccer is over, it is time for swimming lessons in Victoria, followed in May by thrice-weekly swim practices at Portlock.

The opponents were giant seven-year-olds fed on Devonshire cream and scones.

At least with swimming, spectator parents can expect sometime in July to dispose of umbrellas and plastic bag seat coverings. The sun is not a component of soccer practices.

In reviewing my new life as a sports parent I realize motherhood dealt me a few misconceptions. The first came during pregnancy as I considered maternity leave an opportunity to finally write that novel. Then came the vision of greener fields full of time once my children hit school.

This is a joke. Ha. Ha. The definition of school for parents is meetings, field trips, performances, fundraising, helping in the classroom and driving, driving, driving. (Not to mention making the dreaded lunches and spending 30 minutes every morning LOOKING FOR SOCKS.)

But if you are a sports parent, you can add ferries, money and dirt-caked laundry to the equation. On the issue of laundry: one soccer skill involves hugging the ball to the chest and rolling around the field in an apparent effort to love the earth, mud and all. Sierra returned from a recent practice lamenting the chill this skill beset upon her fleshless bones. However, the minute we stepped onto the Victoria soccer field — while others happily kicked the ball — Sierra grabbed a ball and began tumbling on her back through the near-frozen grass.

Then there's the ferries. Last Thursday I pulled my children out of school early for a swimming-related ferry ride. We left the school at 2 p.m. for the 2:15 ferry, when it was innocently noted that our travelling companions left earlier, heading for the 2 p.m. boat.

Reality slapped me on the head, shot through my body and exited from my foot which slammed down on the gas pedal. Yes! The schedule had changed. My car instantly transformed into a rocket, blasting toward Fulford.

Although the last 63 ferries I've taken all left late, I knew this would be the exception. I flew past a truck on Lee's Hill. I cut corners. I exceeded the speed limit (just a little, of course, Sergeant).

We arrived at the terminal to discover it was late ferry number 64. I had been there about five minutes when the truck from Lee's Hill calmly putted into the parking lot.

The money part of sports parenting is more serious than the time and ferries, although they are all connected.

For those families barely making it financially or slowly sinking into their overdraft, funding sports is tough and means giving up other things.

But for really low-income families, it must be impossible and I wonder how many talented, enthusiastic children on this island are forced out of competition for lack of dollars. Perhaps Salt Spring should consider establishing a foundation to award sports scholarships to needy and deserving youngsters.

Sports benefit all children. They teach teamwork, the importance of physical fitness, and the ability to win and lose. They provide a physical outlet and a focus through adolescence.

And although Goliath beat David at Saturday's soccer tournament, in the long run, all those girls were winners.

As for the parents? We had a chance to try out a sixth layer of clothing and practise our speedy driving skills en route to the ferry.

SOCCER DRAMA: Seven-year-old Kaeli Dragomir gets the ball and flies down the field in a Victoria soccer tourney on Saturday.

Island products hit Victoria market

Salt Spring cottage industries are leaping into the export business with the opening of a new produce market in Victoria.

Former Ganges Village Market workers Paul Large and Scott Buckland are the co-owners of Banana Belt Produce, opening today (Wednesday) on Cadboro Bay Road in Victoria.

Their new produce store is selling a truckload of Salt Spring goods, including items from Salt

Spring Roasting Company, Salt Spring Soapworks, Salt Spring Tea Company, Gulf Island Bagels and Garden Living Lettuce.

"Salt Spring has such a romantic name over here," Large said last week. "People really go for it."

Banana Belt Produce is taking over the former Buns Master Bakery store, next to Slaters Meats, which is also getting into Salt Spring exports.

Slaters is now selling a full range of spices from island-based Arbutus Accents, and jams, jellies and chutney for Olde Tyme Kitchens. Products from Sea Change Seafoods are also coming in.

"It think it's damn near every cottage industry on Salt Spring," Large said.

The island's organic farmers will also be represented at the store when their goods are in season.

Poet shares skills at workshop

An April 10 creative writing workshop asks writers to bring their "beginner's mind," whether they are published authors or absolute beginners.

Empty-headed Writing is a one-day workshop led by Peter Levitt, a California poet, essayist, translator, editor and teacher, designed for beginning and experienced writers.

Given in a supportive environment, participants are exposed to techniques "that will encourage authentic and personally expressive" writings.

Levitt has published eight books of poetry, including Bright Root, Dark Root, Running Grass, and One Hundred Butterflies, which is hailed as a great example of American Zen short writings.

In 1989 he received the prestigious Lannan Foundation Literary Award Fellowship in Poetry for works that "represent exceptional literary achievement, foster imaginative critical thinking and call attention to essential humanistic values in creative, skillful and provocative ways."

Levitt's long experience with meditation in the Zen Buddhist tradition is reflected in some of his works.

He also collected the material and edited the well-known The Heart of Understanding, written by Vietnamese Zen master and peace worker Thich Nhat Hanh.

The Empty-headed Writing workshop runs at Salt Spring United Church from 10 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. on April 10.

Cost is $60.

For more information and to register, call Tema Dawn at 537-9439.

Popular horn blower takes stage at Moby's

A popular Moby's Sunday Dinner Jazz act — the Larry Miller Trio — returns this weekend.

Saxophonist Miller is from Nanaimo and has had an active music career. In recent years he has played lead alto sax with Hugh Fraser's International Jazz Orchestra in Victoria, lead tenor sax on Gary Guthman's 1997 Vancouver Island tour and with his sextet last year performed the music of Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers.

Miller's debut CD, called Freyja's Song, was well received.

Pier Magazine stated: "Miller showcases pure tenor virtuosity on his new release . . . With a swinging band of Nanaimo's own Clinton Ryder and Billy Hicks, as well as the very musical stylings of Rob Cheramy and Morris Macklin, Miller blows apart post-bop standards and originals alike."

Music starts at 7 p.m. on Sunday.

READING OF DESIRE:

Dance of desire in artful new book

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

Few books simultaneously engage the eye and mind as much as Diana Hayes' new poetry and photography collection called The Choreography of Desire.

While some of Hayes' photos were included in the Alliance of Salt Spring Artists' Erotic Artshow at ArtSpring, the entire book as art could have been included in the exhibit.

Hayes — who has lived on Salt Spring for many years — has used her own dreams as starting points for three series of photographs of human subjects in the book. They are flavoured by the exotic, meant to suggest the Sahara Desert, the Greek shores of Santorini and a more ephemeral state, which was inspired by Hayes' homeopathic use of delphinium. At the same time, they were actually photographed close to home.

But in both her photographs and poetry, Hayes takes numerous journeys (or choreographed dances, if you like.)

There's the excellent, mythic story of love transforming on a water/island voyage in the long narrative piece called When Love Goes Hungry, (which reads well as a "bedtime story" for adults); she runs west on Highway 101; to Ireland; and through a chilly night with a lover on New Year's Eve.

Hayes isn't afraid to weave humour into her poetry, even though it can be a risky thing to do. She seems to have figured out how to brush a poem with subtle humour, leaving an unimposing dusting.

However, it could be that some poems' emotional impact is lightened by the application of that skill.

She does well at maintaining themes throughout a poem, building up a detailed picture with effective imagery.

I especially love lines such as "the savage epiphany of this chinook" in this stanza from Fallen Angels: "Let us say we were exquisite dancers/with all the savage epiphany of this chinook/with all the intention of summer/all appetite for our lovers/as they made melting angels in the fallen snow."

The poetry reads musically out loud and somehow doesn't let the reader paddle away too quickly.

I found explanations, literary references and even technical details about the process of taking the photographs another welcome element in the book, not just for interest's sake but because it brought the artist out from behind the potential aloofness of her camera.

The Choreography of Desire is a Rainbow Publishers work.

A book launch on Sunday afternoon at The Studio in Vesuvius was sponsored by Theatre Alive! and Active P.A.S.S., with Rainbow Publishers.

In addition to poetry, fiction and articles published in numerous magazines, Hayes has written Two of Swords, Moving Inland, The Classical Torso in 1980 and the play Isomania: Saga of the Settlers, which was performed on Salt Spring in 1983, 1987 and 1991.

The Choreography of Desire sells for $17.95.

Blues tornado storms Harbour House Hotel

The Harbour House is hosting the prime minister on April 8.

The "prime minister of the blues," that is, Dutch Mason.

He's been in the blues business about as long as Jean Chretien has been in politics, starting at age 14. Since then he's shared the stage with some of the world's greatest blues artists.

Next Thursday he'll do it again in the Harbour House's new party room with Johnny the Tornado, who first played on the streets of New Orleans, transforming into a blues legend as he hit just about "every juke joint and roadhouse in North America."

The Tornado has performed with Therman Holmes, Alberta Adams, Little Sonny Willis, Mr. Bo, Chicago Pete and the Detroit Blues Band, among many others.

Mason was chosen as the first winner of the Great Canadian Blues Award by listeners of CBC Radio's Saturday Night Blues show.

Bill Law, the show's producer, said, "We've received some really great mail over the years, but this was fantastic. Judging by the response, if Dutchie wants to change from being the Prime Minister of the Blues to being the country's prime minister, all he has to do is wear a tie."

He was also one of 20 Canadian blues performers on the Juno

Award-winning disc The Great Canadian Blues Project.

Special guest for the evening is Terry Edmunds.

Tickets for Dutch Mason and Johnny Tornado are $10 and available at the Harbour House's front desk.

'In your face' new play reveals hypocrisy, man's animal nature

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

Few topics can line the intellectual battlefields quicker than censorship versus freedom of belief and expression.

Few individuals embody the battle more than the Marquis de Sade, the controversial French novelist of the late 18th and early 19th century, who has become somewhat of a "cult figure" in recent years.

The Marquis de Sade was a vehement challenger of censorship, insisting that individuals be allowed to hold and express their own beliefs and mores and, perhaps most famously, choose their preferred sexual practices.

Obie Award-winning playwright David Wright has waded into the deepest heart of the Marquis' thoughts and life and emerged with an extraordinary play called Quills.

Graffiti Theatre Company's production of Quills opens tomorrow night (Thursday) at ArtSpring.

The action takes place during the Marquis' last days in an insane asylum in Paris and lets the censorship battle run full tilt, exploring sex, religion, politics, gore, love and adultery.

According to the play's director Yvonne Adalian and lead actor Russell Roberts from Vancouver, Quills is going to be intellectually stimulating, visually stunning and definitely not boring.

"There aren't many subtleties in the play," explains Roberts. "It's in your face. It's about hypocrisy, morals as a crutch, religion as a crutch, acknowledging the animal nature of man and not shying away from it."

Wright has presented the material using wit and wicked humour, interspersed with elements of horror and surprise.

"Extreme" is an adjective that kept jumping into the discussion about the play.

In Quills, the Marquis challenges the beliefs accepted by his society, and the right to express alternate ones "to the extreme."

One aspect of the argument is framed by his asking: "Are your convictions so fragile that mine cannot stand in opposition to them?"

While imprisoned in the late 18th century, the Marquis de Sade wrote what were considered shocking, licentious novels such as "Justine ou les malheurs de la vertu" and "La philosophie dans le boudoir."

Quills is Graffiti's fifth and most ambitious project in its two-plus years of existence. Previous successes were Random Acts, A Tailored Affair, Jack and Jill, and TORMENT: The Marquis de Sade (played by Russell Roberts) torments the abbé who administers an asylum (James Wilkinson) during a rehearsal of Graffiti Theatre's production of Quills. In a different scene Caitlin Brownrigg (left) looks up admiringly. The show runs April 1-3, 7-10 at ArtSpring.

Chekhov in the Meadow.

Adalian has directed numerous productions on Salt Spring — including Graffiti's Random Acts and Jack and Jill — and has acted professionally on Salt Spring, in other Canadian cities and England. She has also been involved with Salt Spring's Theatre Alive! since its inception.

Since Graffiti has this year been recognized as an emerging professional theatre company with receipt of a B.C. Arts Council grant, it's only fitting that an actor of Roberts' calibre has agreed to play the Marquis de Sade.

Roberts was recommended to Adalian by Belfry Theatre personnel.

"I was very very happy when Russell seemed to be amenable," says Adalian.

People will likely recognize Roberts from his roles on TV shows such as The Adams Family, Murphy's Law and Highlander.

But like many film and TV actors, Roberts is excited to have such a challenging and provoking stage project as Quills. "One doesn't get to act like this very often," he says.

And he has acted frequently on stage — in more than 60 productions over the past 20 years. Shakespeare works such as Midsummer Night's Dream and Hamlet; a musical about a school for gay people, called B Average, which played at the Gay Games in New York; and a Feydeau farce are among his most memorable roles.

As well, Roberts values highly the partnership between the actor and audience, which makes every night on stage different.

"The relationship between the actors and the live audience is irreplaceable," he says.

It's a two-way dynamic. "I provide the stimulus; you provide the response."

Roberts' family has owned a cabin on Salt Spring for 36 years and he is getting to know the island even better by temporarily residing here for five weeks this spring. The only drawback so far is adjusting to being away from his wife and two young sons.

Other cast members are well-known island actors Caitlin Brownrigg, Vaughn Fulford, Amanda Spottiswoode, James Wilkinson and Charles Wilton.

Quills runs April 1, 2, 3, 7, 8, 9, 10. Tickets are $15, except on April 1 and 7, when they are 2 for $20. Group bookings are also available by calling 537-1316. They are on sale at Volume II and Acoustic Planet.

Quills is not suitable for children.

ARTSPRING - 100 JACKSON AVE., S.S.I., B.C., V8K 2V8

Carving a west coast niche

Salt Spring's Alan Moberg, who sings intimately of B.C. life, among many other subjects, was one of the musicians who thrilled a full house at Lion's Hall Sunday. Moberg performed in concert with country singer Laurie Thain and Ramesh Meyers, a local songwriter, musician and recording studio operator.

Autoharp player among the 'truly memorable'

Lots of musicians tell Terry Warbey they would like to perform on Salt Spring, but there's not many he jumps at the chance to bring here.

When he heard the Washington-based Bryan Bowers Trio was touring in the area, however, he didn't hesitate to set up a concert. It runs next Thursday night, beginning at 8, at All Saints By-the-Sea.

Warbey first heard autoharp player/vocalist Bryan Bowers at the Vancouver Folk Festival in the 1980s but has seen him more than once.

While Warbey has heard far more performers than the average person, he says Bowers is among the truly memorable ones.

Press material explains that Bowers has toured for more than 30 years and his shows always include down-home stories, wacky jokes and unpretentious charm.

The trio's other members are Dan Duggin and Kate Bowers. Between the three of them they play mandocello, accordion, tenor guitar and autoharp, and create beautiful, rangy vocal harmonies.

Duggin retired early from an optometry career to pursue a path of in-demand accordion maestro. He has recently performed in China, Alaska, Sedro Woolley and Seattle and is a member of six different bands.

"Kate Bowers was caught singing in the shower shortly before marrying Bryan," with her greatest musical inspiration cited as "an episode of Green Acres where Wayne Newton was 'discovered' singing in the shower."

The trio, however, travels without the shower.

"I do provide the guys with loaded squirt guns to simulate the shower experience should an earthquake erupt in my knees while performing," says Kate.

Tickets for the Bryan Bowers Trio concert are $10 and available at Acoustic Planet.

Hick two-steps to stage at Legion

Kenny Byron and The Tragically Hick are on the Royal Canadian Legion stage again on Saturday.

The Salt Spring Island country band has been booked by the Legion for a gig every two months for the rest of the year.

The Hick plays music that people can dance to, whether or not they know how to two-step. The band has recently been adding some new Alan Jackson tunes to its lineup, which also includes hits by Brooks & Dunn, Prairie Oyster, George Strait, Dwight Yoakam, Garth Brooks and many other popular country artists.

Band members are lead singer Kenny Byron, rhythm guitarist and singer Darrel Byron, lead guitarist Paul Smith, bassist Ron Cooke, drummer Mike Stefancsik and keyboardist Tony Richards.

All are Salt Spring Islanders except Darrel Byron, who lives in Chemainus.

The Tragically Hick was formed two and a half years ago, developing a loyal following in that time.

The music starts at 8:30 p.m. on Saturday. Admission is open to Legion members and their guests.

Strikers nudge out Bays United to win district cup

The Salt Spring Strikers brought home the District Cup over the weekend with a pair of tight tournament wins in Sooke.

The under-14 girls squad edged out Bays United 1-0 Saturday and scratched out an exhausting 2-1 victory in the final Sunday over Gorge.

"They were two very tough matches, and it took a total team effort to win," said coach Terry Morton.

The Bays United contest turned out to be a tactical battle because the field was only three-quarters the size of a regulation pitch.

"It was very aggressive and we had to be particularly strong on both offence and defence," Morton said.

"Against Gorge it was two teams going full out the whole game, with extremely tight checking."

The Strikers roster includes keeper Diana Anglos, Ciara Brazier, Melanie Callas, Valri

Cunningham, Alyssa Dares, Kelly Kerr, Jocelyn Langdon, Melanie Moore, Tristin Morton, Mary Regan, Robin Simms, Laurel Temmel, Lindsay Urquhart, Bliss Wiebe and Caitlin Wilson.

WILD AND WINDY: Salt Spring FC forward Ryan Smith (No. 6) rarely needs any external stimulus to get him flying through the air. But the rest of Smith's FC teammates used a strong trailing breeze Sunday to break out of a 0-0 halftime score and run away with a 3-0 decision over Gorge during a Challenge Cup quarter-final at Portlock Park.

Strong wind pushes FC closer to cup in 3-0 victory over Gorge

By MIKE LEVIN

With a Challenge Cup semi-finals berth in its sights, Salt Spring FC used a little boost from nature to secure a spot in soccer's final four.

A strong trailing wind pushed FC to three second-half goals and a 3-0 victory over Gorge Sunday at Portlock Park in front of the season's largest hometown crowd.

Missing Jonathan McDonald in nets and Andrew Walde from midfield, coach Darryl Lister was forced to shake up his lines.

McDonald had played last week's 2-1 win over Gordon Head with a concussion but was shunted to the sidelines for Sunday's match. Walde was sitting with three yellow cards on his record.

So Lister moved potent striker Corbin Scott into the back row and Chad Little between the posts. Both came up with strong performances.

But it was lanky Jason Harrison, moved up to the forward line, who rose highest to the opportunity.

Harrison provided Salt Spring's lone excitement in a dismal first half when he banged a header off the post in the 28th minute.

And when the momentum shifted at half time, Harrison used his head to convert two perfect crosses before the 62-minute mark for a two-goal advantage.

"They just outthrust us in the first half, outpushed us, beat us to every ball," said FC captain Colin Walde. "A big part was that the wind made it really tough to judge the ball."

Salt Spring had beaten and tied Gorge in two previous meetings, but it was the visitors who exploded from the opening whistle.

They had two shots on net within the first two minutes and could have been up 1-0 in the 13th minute had Little not sacrificed his body to block a point-blank blast.

With the wind advantage, Gorge used the long ball to keep FC cornered in its own end for most of the half.

But with an inability to score came cracks in the visitors' advantage.

Late in the first half a spate of three yellow cards in five minutes shocked Gorge.

It also angered its coach, whose choice words for the referee earned him an early exit from the sidelines five minutes before the break.

Harrison's first came less than a minute into the second frame.

Pete Aust directed a free kick right into Gorge's crease and Harrison slid head first into a crowd of legs, found the ball and put the eventual winner on the board.

His second was a precise play off a Scott free-kick from 20 metres, validating Lister's decision to move the striker into the back.

"(Scott) controlled things very well from back there," said the coach. "We needed that control in this game."

From that point on it was all Salt Spring, with Jesse Fisher rounding out the total with an easy header in the 75th minute.

Salt Spring's semi-final opponent has not yet been announced, although the game is set for Victoria on Sunday.

"I've never been to the semis before, so I don't care who we play," said Walde. "We're playing together as a team right now so I know we'll be in against whoever (our opponent) is."

Welcome...

and best wishes to

Salt Spring judo team comes home with suitcase full of tourney medals

Salt Spring judo club members were itching to get back into competition after a long break while mate Sophia Haase fought in the recent national championships.

The energy was focussed well enough for the 12-member team to return from a zone tournament with 13 medals, all but four of them gold.

At the Vancouver Island Invitational Saturday in Campbell River, Haase breezed through her juvenile and junior categories to take top spot in both.

But she wasn't the only one to dominate the event.

Matt King and Marius Lohman, both 17, so outclassed their categories that the pair had to face off against each other in the gold-medal fight.

Lohman's 25-kg advantage made the difference, handing King the silver.

In the 45-kg class, Danny Chamblin, 10, walked away with the gold medal in just his first tournament.

Other gold medals went to Yoni Marmorstein, 10, in the 27-kg class; Sol Ruben, 10, in the 31-kg; Samantha Bird, eight, in 34-kg; Ross MacKay, 10, in 62.5-kg; Adrian Elliot, 19, in 57-kg.

Leslie Hamilton, 17, used a first-tournament performance to return with a silver medal in 68-kg, while Calum Adams, 10, took bronze in the 40-kg class as did Nico Lohman, 15, in 65-kg.

Meet starts track season

The Salt Spring Track and Field Club got its competition schedule and a new coach last week.

Meets begin April 10-11 in Sidney and continue every two weeks until the finale June 12-13 in Powell River.

About 20 locals aged nine to 14 will compete this year, although there is still room for more athletes, said team coordinator Jim Proctor.

New resident Lyn Thompson, a level-two coach, will also help out with the squad.

Former coach Richard Bennett has agreed to run Sunday practices and Vancouver Island coach Al Johnson will also contribute services.

Diane Tremblay is the club treasurer.

Angels crying as GISS slaughters team 13 to 1

It was a decisive season-opener for GISS junior boys soccer as the Scorpions recorded a 13-1 victory over Queen of Angels at GISS.

"It's tough to tell how good a team we are this year," said coach Mike Davis. "We've got a good core of four or five Grade 10s, but not a lot of depth after that."

Davis admitted that GISS' mid-island league will be lopsided, with two or three competitive teams and the rest offering results like Queen of Angels.

The Scorpions will be paced by Metro-level player Tyler Laitinen and will face their toughest league tests against Cowichan and Brentwood.

"We've got the skills to be competitive," Davis said.

"But it will take some time to see how well we use them."

The Scorpions play next at Brentwood on Thursday.

Football registration ends April 9

Registration for two island football teams to play this fall has a cut-off date of April 9.

Signups can be done at the PARC office at Portlock Park.

Boys and girls aged 11 to 13 years (as of December 31) are eligible for the junior-bantam squad.

Those aged 14 and 15 can play for the bantam team.

Registration is $85 per player, not including a refundable $65 equipment deposit.

As well as players, the local association is looking for coaches to help with both teams. More information can be obtained from Bruce Stewart at 537-1788.

Wanted: competitive opponents for hot GISS Scorpions squad

By MIKE LEVIN
Driftwood Staff

Scoring goals will not be a problem for GISS Scorpions in their new senior girls soccer season, but finding competitive opponents might be.

Scorpions opened their campaign Tuesday with a lazy 8-0 decision over Chemainus at GISS.

It left coach Doug Pearson thinking about the future.

"Actually we're still trying to organize who will play for the team, how many juniors to include and what positions the girls will play," he said. "One thing for sure is that the team out there today wasn't the final product."

Pearson will have to juggle his roster to include the return of Claire Rustad (definite) and Kecia Laitinen (possible), who are still playing with their Metro teams.

With a guaranteed berth in May's AA provincial championships as host team, GISS finds itself with only two or three competitive teams on its schedule.

Pearson says he will try to arrange exhibition games to keep his squad's play tight, which might prevent the Scorpions from growing overconfident.

"I don't think they know how good they can be yet," said the coach. "This team has a history of going to the provincials but never doing as well as they can because the league they play in is not really all that good."

Tuesday the Scorpions loped through their 60-minute game. The eight goals represented only a fraction of their chances. Corry Schwagly opened the scoring romp in the second minute with a slick solo effort.

Joelle Morrison added another before the half as GISS played all but a few minutes in the Chemainus side of midfield.

The second half was a testament to the potent offensive partnership of Tanisha Van Pelt and Kyla Dares. Both forwards scored three times, often on feeds from the other, to round out the final score.

Pearson was particularly pleased with the total midfield control of Morrison and Sarah Cameron, a command that will be vital against tougher opponents.

"There is so much talent on this team, especially because so many of the girls have played together for years," the coach said. "It will be tough settling the roster."

The senior girls' schedule goes on Tuesdays this year. GISS played its second contest yesterday at Ladysmith.

Juniors play to a draw

GISS junior girls soccer Scorpions evened their record at 1-1-1 March 22 with a 1-1 draw against Cowichan at GISS.

The previous week GISS notched a 3-1 win over Brentwood but dropped a 4-2 decision to Frances Kelsey.

At the Rainbow Road field, GISS found itself down 1-0 at the break. Pushed by the strong play of sweeper Heidi Scott, the locals finally evened the score on a goal by Claire Rustad.

The striker almost stole a victory when she just missed a marker in the game's final minute.

The junior team's games run weekly on Mondays.

GISS faced Duncan Christian at home March 29.

Basketball league for kids set

Tony Mason and returning members of the GISS junior basketball team are organizing a basketball league for Grade 6 and 7 students.

The league will run Tuesdays from 3:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. at GISS starting April 3 and running until May 25. It will split the afternoon into two sections: the first session will be a skills clinic, followed by actual scrimmaging.

Registration is $20 and forms can be picked up at SIMS or from Mason at 653-4679.

Fundraising is next step as group gets go ahead for new firehall

Acting-president Emily Switzer had good news for members of the North Galiano Community Association at their recent annual general meeting.

She reported documents signed last week by Minister of Municipal Affairs Jenny Kwan finally permit the purchase and use of land at the corner of Porlier Pass Drive and Cook Road for a new fire hall.

A fourth reading of the bylaw must be completed by our two Trust representatives and the area chairman — it is expected this should be done in a matter of days.

President Switzer and her board, as well as four boards before them, have worked hard to obtain this valuable site for a new hall. Six years have passed since the idea was first suggested.

Switzer said, "It is now time for the next step, a fundraising campaign."

An application has already been made for a casino night and other ideas are being discussed. A building fund account has been established and donations have been made."

The community has done much fundraising in the past.

The old No. 1 hall, built on leased property, was completed with volunteer labour with funds raised locally, as was the No. 2 hall, and restorations and additions made to the community hall.

More from North Galiano's AGM next week.

Lions Park centre

Several years ago the Galiano Lions Club purchased land on Burrill Road, a former field belonging to the Bellhouse family. There they built a hall with a meeting room which could hold about 100 people, washrooms accessible from both inside and outside, and a "dream" kitchen.

The hall has become a popular venue for meetings, dinners, dances and other social events, but is not large enough for bigger gatherings.

Last fall construction began on an addition, more than doubling the area within.

A covered entrance porch opening mid-way between the old and new halls has sliding doors which allow for two "hundred capacity" halls or one very large one.

Club members have done all the work themselves.

Work bees were frequent over the winter months. The dry-walling and interior painting is now completed.

The floors are currently being finished and the plumbing installed.

Club members hope to have the new facilities completely finished and ready for use by the middle of April, just in time for their annual seafood dinner — always a highlight in the island's social calendar.

Golf club season opens

Due to the very wet weather in recent weeks, golf is off to a rather slow start on Galiano.

The season began with men's and women's days, and is now open to the public. The clubhouse opens in April — 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. — with light meals available.

The season begins in earnest in May, with captains Marlene McLean and Ken Daigle organizing a number of tournaments and off-island events for participating members.

Officers appointed by the board after the March 20 annual general meeting are: president, Brian Cowperthwaite; vice president, Phil McAllen; treasurer, Jocelyn Gifford; secretary, Louise DeCario; house chairman, Bill Foster; grounds chairman, Jack Paine. Directors at large are Catherine Floe and Roy Davies.

Power squadron

The studying has been going on for six months. For two hours every Tuesday evening, six local people (three fellows and three gals) met with instructor Jack Paine to learn about marine safety.

According to Ellen den Holder, the material studied was very detailed and the exams held a week or so ago, quite stiff. As appointed parks director for Wallace Island Marine Park, Ellen was glad to be one of the four successful candidates.

Her new skills will be useful in dealing with boaters on Wallace and for her daily trips back and forth to Wallace from her home at Retreat Cove.

She reports the reef marker at the south end of Wallace (Panther Point) has not as yet been replaced by the coast guard. It disappeared in a recent winter storm.

Delicate Easter lilies a sure sign of spring in the islands

By LINDA CANNON
Driftwood Contributor

It must be spring. Swallows swoop, hummingbirds hover, frogs flirt and the combination of such alliteration and even the possibility of sunshine just pushed me over the top.

If it stops raining, go out for a walk. Even if it doesn't stop raining, go out for a walk. Look at all the undergrowth; it's desperate to pop out in the laciest green. Admire the red-flowering currant, it's beautiful now, and no garden should be without one. The hummingbirds are mad for it.

Speaking of hummingbirds, if any of you saw one this year before March 13, will you please give me a call? I'm collecting information on rufous hummingbirds for the Hummertrack '99 project.

OUR BETTER NATURE

But back to plants. Another local species perfect for gardens is the white fawn lily. These delicate, nodding white lilies are commonly referred to as "Easter lilies," presumably because they bloom in March and April.

Many lily bulbs, corms and root-stalks were a food staple in spring and mid-summer Native cuisine. Chocolate lilies, yellow glacier lilies, pink fawn lilies and pond lilies were consumed like root vegetables, each with its own specialized method of preparation.

Native cuisine is quite an art, however, so don't try this at home unless you're an expert. The corms of the yellow glacier lily and the pink fawn lily can be poisonous if improperly prepared, and the white fawn lily is considered to be poisonous, period.

Easter lilies

So don't eat the lilies. Don't pick them, either. What you can do is plant them! Local nurseries carry many species of indigenous lilies, and all you have to do is ask for "erythronium" if you want the graceful "Easter" type.

There are four kinds: pink fawn (erythronium revolutum), yellow glacier (erythronium grandiflorum), white fawn (erythronium montanum) and a second white fawn (erythronium oregonum).

To tell the two species of white fawn lily apart, just check their leaves.

Erythronium montanum has plain pale-green leaves, but erythronium oregonum has mottled leaves.

It's likely the mottled leaves that give the white fawn lily its name, because the spots look a little like a fawn's dappled coat.

There's another story to the naming of this particular lily. It's said that the namer, John Burroughs, thought the two top leaves of the lily were shaped like a fawn's ears.

That's a more romantic notion and, since it's spring, I'll believe it.

Bossin night herring kept out of cookies — probably

By DAYLE JOHNSON
Driftwood Contributor

Daffodils are everywhere on Saturna and still the temperature dips to zero at night. Right now I am looking out the window at a curtain of hail. I think that nature seems as reluctant to accept spring as I am.

On Saturday the Community Hall was filled with music as Bob Bossin entertained us with his songwriting skills and his wonderful sense of humour.

The evening began with an excellent array of herring prepared by local chef Hubertus Surm. There was fried herring with three kinds of chutney and sauce, pickled herring, rolled herring, Moroccan herring, and "herring Danika" a secret family recipe.

A wonderful hot potato salad,

SATURNA NOTES

fresh bread and salad accompanied the herring. Though there were cookies for dessert, everyone steered clear, fearing that these too might include herring.

Coming events

Saturna leaps into Easter next weekend starting with the annual Easter bake sale. The work and the proceeds from this annual event is shared between the Women's Service Club and the Saturna Parents Advisory Council.

The pies are so good that people start lining up long before opening time just so they might get one. Once the pie frenzy is over, people relax a little and there is still lots of baking, a cake walk, plants for your home, a raffle of island services and prizes, children's goodies and a tea with Welsh cakes and homemade jam to keep you entertained.

That night there will be the Lions Club Crab Fest. Tickets are available at both stores and this is a seriously fun event.

Don't forget to bring your own weapons because you will be given a whole crab to deal with and you want to look like you know what you are doing.

Theatre on the Rock is practising like mad on its new undertaking, Dearly Departed. Saturna is fortunate to have such an active theatre group and every production they have put on has been wonderful. Plan to attend this one and you won't be disappointed.

Kristina Branicki will be running the market in the Community Hall this summer and we look forward to enjoying this event each week. Nice to be able to go to the hall every Saturday and find fresh produce, crafts and have lunch with friends.

Almost like being on Salt Spring 10 years ago, huh?

The Women's Service Club is currently renovating the washroom at the Community Hall to make it accessible to the handicapped and is going to replace the bench outside the hall.

The Tinkerers, Judith and Jurgen, will be in the parking lot at Saturna General Store for the Mothers' Day weekend. If you need anything sharpened, bring it up and you will be both entertained and happy with the results.

Herrings returned to harbour

Thirty-five years ago

• After years of worrying that the annual herring run in Fulford Harbour had disappeared forever, local residents awoke to see thousands of sea birds feeding on a huge school of herring that turned the harbour into a mass of activity.

• Three young Salt Spring ladies dominated piano awards at the annual Cowichan Music Festival. Judy Luddington won the top junior piano category while Glynnis Horel was selected as top under-12 performance. Angela Bridgen won honours in an under-12 duet.

Thirty years ago

• Mrs. Alan Hedger left Port Hardy with a fishing tale for the ages. The Salt Spring resident hooked a 200-pound halibut with a hand-line and fought it for about an hour, only to come up with a broken line. Undeterred, she tried a new hook and finally caught the same fish, with her original hook still dangling from its mouth.

• The purchase of Salt Spring Trading Co. and Ganges Crest by the Mouat Company laid the groundwork for combining the businesses into one large retail outlet in central Ganges.

Twenty-five years ago

• Longtime island veterinarian David Lott closed his local clinic prior to leaving for Ghana where he was to set up rural vet services in the northern part of the country. Lott would also teach locals the skills needed to open their own clinics.

• Student demonstrations at GISS were the major force behind curtailing a school board plan to dump the semester system.

Twenty years ago

• After nine months of investigation, a recreation consulting firm tabled its report on the future recreational needs of Salt Spring. The report centred on new facilities and upgrading of existing ones at a proposed cost of nearly $774,000.

• Galiano and Mayne islands were the first telephone systems to go digital. Both systems would be more costly than the existing submarine cable one, but B.C. Tel said it wanted to provide better service for its customers.

Fifteen years ago

• Problems associated with plans for a local sewer system started bubbling faster when the media was excluded from sitting in on meetings between the Sewer Alternatives Committee and the project's engineer.

DOWN THE YEARS

• Salt Spring's most recent centenarian got a special message on her birthday. When Sarah Thompson turned 100 at Lady Minto Hospital she received a note of congratulations from Queen Elizabeth.

Ten years ago

• A local committee set up to study the possibility of incorporating Ganges was besieged from all sides with warnings and requests for the corporate move. The committee decided to hold public meetings to find out what Salt Spring residents really thought.

• Another Salt Spring resident made a mark in the piano section of Cowichan's annual music festival. Geoffrey Davidson, 14, took top honours in the intermediate category with a performance of Lynn Freeman Olson's Celebration Concerto.

New yoga retreat scheduled

Islanders can tap into a system of health care dating back more than 5,000 years at the Salt Spring Centre's next Yoga and Ayurveda Retreat weekend.

It runs April 9-11 at the Blackburn Road centre.

Ayurveda is the centuries-old system which is usually translated as "the science or knowledge of life."

"Ayurveda teaches people how to listen to the rhythm that beats and breathes through all things," explains a centre press release.

Participants will learn their own body-type or "dosha," which will help them achieve mind and body balance.

Hatha yoga, the "sister science" to ayurveda, will also be practised. "Through yoga postures, breathing exercises, meditation and cleansing techniques that awaken the deepest self, participants learn the specific effects of these on different body-types."

Salt Spring Centre teachers and Steven Cox of Water's Edge Herb Company in Sidney will lead the retreat.

The centre's health collective will also be available to offer health treatments, including cleansing ayurvedic swedan, "a la carte."

Gourmet vegetarian meals are included. For more information or to register, call Sharon at Salt Spring Centre, 537-2326.

In the swing of things

Swing Shift band members — such as Paul Roach, left, Ted Hickford and Donna Vanderwekken — helped transform Fulford Hall into a hopping night club with a big band music sound. Young and old attended, dancing Saturday night away.

Natural elements used in artful garden

Every garden, like a piece of art or music, needs a focal point, a crescendo: these eye catchers can be the key to your own personal style.

A large rock planted in the centre of your yard might inspire you to try your hand at a sand and rock garden. The style lends itself to the modern west coast home and to a hurried lifestyle.

This type of garden is easily achieved by removing soil to a level at least three inches below existing soil levels. Spread black landscaping fabric or plastic over the area and fill it in with sand or one inch of concrete covered by sand. Round river rock or crushed rock can also be used for a great look.

With careful planning you can leave areas to be planted or sink potted plants into the sand or gravel. Decorative pots can be placed right on top of the chosen surface for extra effect. Not only do they draw the eye to the plants within them, they will accent your theme. Oriental pots planted with azalea and bonsai will give it an Asian feel, while large terra cotta pots of hibiscus might give it a Caribbean flare.

A postage stamp lot might lend itself to a style of cottage gardening, with herbaceous borders of graduating heights framing the coziness of the house.

An Englishman named William Robinson in the 1860s was considered the pioneer of cottage gardens. His style, unlike that of Gertrude Jekyll (another person famous for cottage style) was more like a mixed border, not only consisting of flowers, but also a year-round framework of shrubs.

GARDENING WITH PAM TEMPELMAYR

Love for whimsy may suggest you try your hand at topiary. This art is thought to have originated about 5,000 years ago. Persians grew laterally intertwining branches between rows of trees to create living tunnels like those at Schonbrunn Castle in Vienna. Monastic cultures kept the art alive during the Dark Ages, creating penitential labyrinths and mazes within monastery walls. You don't have to get anywhere near this fancy — a small patio or balcony can set an instant mood with the addition of a single formal or fanciful potted topiary.

In 1625, included in the description of an ideal Jacobean garden was the addition of "a heath of wilderness." We can't go far wrong with this bit of advice. Here on the Pacific northwest coast, nature has done her finest.

Working alongside what is already growing can produce breathtaking results. Primulas and snowdrops growing alongside natural ferns at pond's edge, or silvery hosta growing alongside huckleberries, domestic and wild, set each other off by their very contrasts.

A garden is a reflection of the people who live within its confines. It is also your sanctuary from the "outside" workaday world.

Take time to study your favorite gardens and see what it is in them that rings a chord. Is it what is planted that you like or how it's planted or a combination of both?

Get consultation, but don't let anyone talk you into white daisies when you're allergic to them and your favourite colour is red. Follow your instincts and your expertise will grow alongside your flowers.

Tip: Trying to cultivate moss? Water it with buttermilk, this will aid growth.

Superstition: "The flowers of lavender quilted in a cap comfort the brain very well." Turner's Herbal, 1551.
