Death shocks and saddens community

By ANASTACIA WILDE

Family and friends are grieving the mysterious death of a long-time and well-loved island man who died unexpectedly Sunday afternoon.

John Stepaniuk, 73, was found dead inside the cab of his farm truck, which had crashed into a ditch on his Shepherd Hills property and caught fire.

As of presstime, the cause of death was unknown.

A Victoria coroner performed an autopsy yesterday and members of the Victoria Fire Commission Office came to Salt Spring to investigate the fire, which also spread to the ground.

RCMP, ambulance and fire department personnel responded to a distress call by John's wife Mary, who was worried when her husband of 46 years didn't return from his chores. John was feeding his sheep before the accident.

Emergency services arrived on the scene at approximately 5:05 p.m.

"The vehicle was down a bank at the bottom of Shepherd Hills Road," said fire chief Dave Enfield. "After we extinguished the fire, there was a body inside."

Constable Doug Hewitt said the body was partially burned but couldn't confirm whether it was the fire that took John's life.

"He was a good driver with a good, clean record," the peace officer said. "There's a lot of unknowns. No one was there. No one witnessed anything."

A close friend of the family speculated John

Islanders rattled by Seattle quake

By GAIL SJUBERG
Driftwood Staff

For most Gulf Islanders it was over before they were really sure what had happened — some missed it entirely, while others knew in a blink of an eye that it could only be one thing — an earthquake.

Dancing computer monitors, trembling plants and house beams, and lots of "did you feel it?" talk injected a flash of excitement into last Wednesday morning.

The earthquake, measured at 6.8 on the Richter scale some 56 kilometres south of Seattle, Washington, occurred at 10:54 a.m.

At Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS), Geography 12 students and teacher Rob Griffiths had reason to feel clairvoyant since they were studying earthquakes in class when the real one hit.

Peter Prince was doing some video film editing at his Burgoyne Bay home when the quake confused his usual awareness of regular logging truck traffic.

"I thought it was a logging truck going by — I thought

Grease grooves onto stage in great high school show

By SUSAN LUNDY

Take a talented, energetic cast, throw in excellent choreography, great singing and musicianship and out comes a whole lot of fun at ArtSpring.

Gulf Islands Secondary School's much-anticipated musical Grease blasted onto stage this week, drawing cheering, enthusiastic audiences to the Salt Spring theatre.

What Grease lacks in a searing, in-depth message, it makes up for in sheer fun. High school performing arts students sang, danced and acted their way straight into the hearts of those who attended the three evening shows and one matinee last week.

The entire package, directed by GISS drama teacher Christina Pittmann, amounts to a great evening out for all ages — with a few cautions over mature content for the younger set.

The show's choreography really sizzles and GISS dance teacher Sonia Langer should be commended for her artistic eye.

I particularly liked the choreography created for the "greasers" or Burger Palace Boys. Donned in collar-up leather jackets, hair greased back, they look so cool. Yet much of the choreography contradicts this "coolness," verifying one underlining theme that these dudes are, after all, just 1950s high school boys.

The production is chock full of really talented young performers. Aubrey Zacharias as greaser Kenickie stands out as a remarkable stage presence,

People, environment, economy part of potential sustainability

By ANASTACIA WILDE
Driftwood Staff

Second in a Series
Economic sustainability is quite a buzzword these days.

But before wrestling the complex interdependence of beauty economics to the ground, let's put the horse before the cart and define what it means to live sustainably.

"Sustainability is complicated even outside of the economy, but when you put economy and sustainability together, it's complex," said development researcher Ellen Garvie. "Sustainability looks different to every person."

Garvie is working with a $32,000 grant from Human Resources Development Canada (HRDC) to produce an economic profile of Salt Spring Island, including 200 surveys of local businesses.

Long-term thinking and future-directed initiatives characterize Salt Spring, however, is lacking in jobs that allow young people to develop their skills. "A skilled labour force is what makes us strong as a nation and sustainable as a community,"

"There is a recognition and acknowledgment that developing a continuum in terms of approach to sustainability," she said. "It's not only looking at impact of action today, but looking at everything related to that action."

Buying locally is paramount for a thriving Salt Spring economy and Cooperative Enterprise Centre (CEC). She helped kick-start the recently-opened Growing Circle Food Coop in Ganges with grant money from HRDC.

As part of two pilot projects, Frey acts as liaison to furnish training and financial assistance to Employment Insurance recipients.

When it comes to chain outlets that have landed in Ganges over recent years, critical balance is key. If islanders don't have to dole out transportation costs for dance nights or soccer cleats, it makes sense to support them.

"We benefit from employment and advertising dollars," she pointed out. "There's a real balance between having what you need but not so much that it undermines small local manufacturing and crafts."

Garvie illustrates sustainability in three main arenas — people, environment and economy — to draw an all-encompassing picture of what Salt Spring would look like if sustainability were the driving force in business.

"With people, the real issue is trying to create equity. . . You want the benefits of our community and world."

Ultimately, decisions which use local resources support the environment, Garvie said, with community forests generating added value and income.

Environment-friendly building materials and home construction based on minimal water and energy consumption are wise choices that spur a more sustainable future.

"People have to be aware of the impact of their choices. If they're aware of their choices, that is the first step toward behavioural change,"

Given the huge percentage of self-employed workers on Salt Spring, Garvie advocates removing barriers to growth for businesses that hire employees and training for others to enhance their skills.

In fact, developing a sustainable labour force is perhaps the most pressing challenge facing islanders today.

For an economy to sustain itself, Garvie said, a variety of age groups is needed to maintain staff.

Salt Spring, however, is lacking in jobs that allow young people to develop their skills. "A skilled labour force is what makes us strong as a nation and sustainable as a community,"

Scorpions up one at provincials

Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS) Scorpions got off on the right foot at the AA provincial championships in Kamloops by winning their first game of the tournament Tuesday morning.

Coach Myles Wilson reported the boys won 93-72 against Golden. Al Lemay was player of the game with 37 points.

"We're on the winners side of the bracket," said

Wilson. "The goal was to win the first game and we went out and did that."

The Scorpions' second game was Wednesday afternoon against number 2-ranked Nechako Valley.

The Gulf Islands boys have a number 6 ranking going into the provincials. They qualified by placing second in the Vancouver Island championships February 24.

sustained a heart attack or stroke and went unconscious after tending the sheep.

"I think he suffered some kind of a medical calamity," neighbour Tom Gossett said. "There were no skid marks, he didn't try to veer from the ditch. The mystery is the fire then occurred after he went into the ditch . . . We are hopeful to find out a clearer picture."

Gossett said neighbours observed smoke on the Stepaniuk farm but took little notice because "John was always starting and putting out little burn piles."

There were also explosions reported on Sunday afternoon that went unheeded.

"A neighbour heard a couple of explosions which were taken as farm noises that indicated Johnnie was working with equipment," Gossett said.

While the reasons for death may be a mystery, there is nothing mysterious about the love, respect and high-esteem neighbours showered on John.

"We called him the Mayor of the Cranberry and he really deserved that title because he was so hospitable, he looked after everybody.

He was a great neighbour, always the first on the scene to help you out if you were in trouble," Gossett said.

Along with family neighbours Roy Lamont and Harry Walls, Gossett said the Stepaniuks were pivotal in leading cooperation for group hay-making or lending a hand when the rains were coming. "It was a spirit of cooperation and friendship that dominated our life and Johnnie and Mary were the kingpins."

Gossett wasn't the only one with kind words for John.

"I would classify him as a good neighbour and a fine citizen," said Lamont, friend of 27 years.

"It was a real community effort around here in the Cranberry Valley. He was a person who helped people from all over the island. He's well known not only here but on the other islands as well."

Having worked for more than 25 years with the Ministry of Transportation and Highways,

John served on both Pender and Salt Spring islands as roads maintenance foreman.

"When the snow fell on Salt Spring those guys worked day and night to remove it and make the roads safe. He could operate any machine and he taught fellow workers proper maintenance procedures," Gossett said.

Born in Dublany, Poland in 1927, John was a member of the Polish forces and also joined the British Royal Air Force during World War II. He moved to Salt Spring in the years following the war's end and fathered five sons.

As a boy, Gossett said, John was separated from his family due to the German occupation of Poland and made it to Russia safely all by himself. He was later reunited with his father in England.

"He came such a long way, he worked so hard. His example is that through hard work and taking advantage of opportunities, you can make it," Gossett said. "He's a very good example for young people today. You can go far in this life and still remain a good person."

Friends and loved ones concur John was a tireless community worker who loved Salt Spring and wanted to maintain the rural, island lifestyle. His generous spirit, resourcefulness and deep concern for his community spurred him into the political sphere in the early '70s, when he served alongside Mike Larmour as one of the first Islands Trust trustees.

John undertook subsequent terms as trustee in the mid-'80s and early '90s.

With countless years under his belt as a farmer, clearing land and making hay fields and pasture land, John was a strong advocate for strengthening local agriculture and supported family-operated farms.

"He had difficulty really with the new economics of industrialization in agriculture," Gossett recalled. "He felt that small farms had a place in our society and they could produce the type of organic, healthy food that we all want to have. He really dedicated himself to that principle and took leadership in living that kind of life."

John's wife Mary is surrounded by her five sons and all of their families in mourning. She said she is doing "as well as can be expected," but her heart jumps when a son turns on the tractor and she runs to the window to see if John is there.

"We've been partners in this enterprise for 46 years," she said. "It's a massive great void which nothing will ever fill."

Mary spoke of the first time she met John, nearly half a century ago.

He drove a truck to her home to buy firewood.

"We got it all loaded and then away he went and got stuck. We had to unload the entire truck, move it and fill it all up again. And off he went," she remembered. "It was very romantic."

A memorial gathering for John will be held in Meaden Hall at the Legion on Saturday, March 10 from 1 to 4 p.m. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to Lady Minto Hospital or the Royal Canadian Legion.

John is survived by his wife Mary and his five sons Scott, Ron, Peter, David and Alan, and their families, and 11 grandchildren.

Fraser Institute 'report card' under fire for its rankings

Gulf Islands Secondary School (GISS) received its usual lukewarm "grade" from the Fraser Institute's 2001 edition of the B.C. secondary schools "report card" released Monday.

The institute ranks B.C. private and public schools based on provincial exam results, number of exams taken, graduation rate and related factors.

GISS is given a 5.9/10 grade — the same average score granted in the last five years — putting it in the 160/278 ranking range.

The Fraser Institute report card has come under increasing fire since its introduction in 1993 for not providing an accurate picture of secondary school education and using a formula which favours private schools.

This year education groups representing trustees, teachers, principals, superintendents and secretary treasurers issued a joint press release denouncing the report card.

"Although the Fraser Institute states that this is only one part of the picture, it presents the information as if it were a valid stand-alone measure to compare the relative performance of schools. The simplistic rankings, which are produced using this statistic, misinform the public about the complex and multi-faced question of school performance and quality."

Ministry of Education information recently reported that GISS students had earned the top grade point averages in the B.C. public school system three out of the last four years.

• Many health problems, result from a diet too high in fat. Now migraine-sufferers are being told to reduce their fat-intake to about 28 grams per day. It seems that eating less fat keeps the brain chemical, serotonin, higher in the body thus easing the headaches. Worth a try!

• Health fraud is rampant throughout the world. Often the promotion of some health products use words like "scientific breakthrough", "miraculous cure", "exclusive product", "secret ingredient" or "ancient remedy". The ad texts usually contain "medicalese", impressive-sounding terminology to disguise a lack of good science. Again, if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is.

• Carbohydrate sweeteners (sucrose, fructose etc) account for about 25% of the total calories of the typical North American diet. Two-thirds of our sugar consumption is added by food and beverage manufacturers. Want to lose weight? Read food and beverage labels and reduce your intake of these sweeteners.

• Our bodies need 60mg of vitamin C daily (100mg for smokers). However, it is recommended that we get at least 200mg of 1000mg daily as insurance since many people consume diets high in processed food. Levels higher than 1000mg do not appreciably improve health.

Dock closure headache for some

For one Salt Spring business family, Long Harbour dock construction on the 7 a.m. sailing from Swartz Bay — it was continually overhead. When they contacted B.C. Ferries to discuss the problem, they were told that making a reservation would not work because they could not be in the terminal the required 40 minutes in advance of sailing time to claim it. Not being able to claim a reservation in time resulted in their paying a $25 cancellation fee.

Ann Carpenter, B.C. Ferries communications coordinator, said it was her understanding that people making reservations on the 7 a.m. ferry were getting on that ferry.

Long Harbour dock construction is on schedule, said Carpenter, with regular service set to return on Friday, March 16.

She said the reservation system where the final choice will be announced and displayed.

Island flag contest details fine-tuned

Details of a flag design contest on Salt Spring are coming together as a result of recent meetings by a steering committee.

Committee members on Saturday finalized several details, including timelines and entry rules.

Entries for the competition will be invited up until July 1, when a panel of judges will select the winner in time for the fall fair September 15.

Tree adoption project thriving

Tree-lovers can adopt their own piece of nature by contributing $500 or more to save Burgoyne Bay trees.

Those donating over $500 to the Adopt-A-Tree program will have their name engraved in a clay plaque and attached to a Burgoyne Bay tree.

The plaque program is being organized by Maggie Schubart and Nina Raginsky, who has also launched a card-selling fundraiser to aid the covenanting of trees currently owned by Texada land Corporation.

The Adopt-A-Tree fundraiser, which includes the sale of cards, has raised over $29,000, mostly in pledges.

Texada has agreed to stop logging in Raginsky's area of interest until April 2 — the deadline by which $200,000 needs to be pledged to cover the cost of trees that would have been harvested.

Raginsky has further information on historical, cultural and ecological background of the 200-acre parcel. Anyone interested is encouraged to call her at 537-4515.

Pledges can also be made by calling Raginsky, and the cards are available at numerous Salt Spring outlets.

A second walkabout of Burgoyne Valley is slated for Saturday, March 17. Carports from Artspiring leave at 2 p.m. or meet at Burgoyne Bay trail early settlement and Raginsky will talk about local fauna and flora.

ANSWER: It might be helpful to look at various categories of flooring products and see what is available.

WOODFLOORS - A good choice for many areas. I have talked about wood floors in previous articles so I won't add any details.

BAMBOO - Talk about a wonderful renewable resource! Basically a rapidly growing grass, bamboo makes a very durable floor. It comes as solid planks that can be nailed or glued down.

RESILIENT FLOORING - That's right, good old fashioned "lino" is a natural product made from wood & cork "floor" & linseed oil. If you like resilient floors without squares or patterns, this marbled surface could be the answer. Plus, wait till you see the colours available: subdued or vibrant, earthy or deep-toned. Linoleum is the product of choice for kitchen, bathrooms, laundry, playroom & many other areas.

NEXT TIME - Wool carpet & cork tiles.

BORN AND RAISED until teenage years in Prague, Canada became Tom's home in 1969. After receiving his degree in Chemistry at St. Mary's University in Halifax, he could not resist the lure of the beauty and climate of the West Coast and moved here in 1972 after participating in the commemorative 1971 canoe pageant from the northernmost part of the province, down Fraser and Thompson Rivers, through the Okanagan and across the Straits to Victoria. Although working several years as a chemical engineer and a scientist, his deepest experience is in the world of business. Through a diverse range of projects, Tom has developed extensive business, managerial, marketing and negotiating skills. Coupled with his life long interest in Real Estate he is glad to put his experience to use as a Realtor on Salt Spring Island, a place he chose for his home back in 1989.

Tom and his wife Mandy (also assisting Tom in Real Estate) recently finished their new home on Long Harbour. They (& their 2 Jack Russells) love to get away on their sailboat whenever time allows.

Though it often involves long hours of work, Tom loves the diversity of the Real Estate profession. He is committed to an uncompromising and knowledgeable service to his clients, whether Sellers or Buyers, using the best available resources, including those of new technologies. He was one of the first Realtors on Salt Spring to be on the web (www.saltspringrealestate.com). About his recent move to Royal LePage he says: "Great move! SALT SPRING SAYS

We asked: Did you feel the quake? Where were you and what did you do?

Brandy Glovka

I was talking on the phone with a friend who said, "I think we're having an earthquake." And I said, "Yes, I believe we are." So we got off the phone and I tried to console my cats.

Natalie Kingwell

Yes, I felt it. I was sitting in my class at school and everything started to shake. So we all got under our desks.

Scott MacNeil

Oh, I felt the earthquake. I was at work in Surrey and everything started to shake and then it was over. I was pretty calm . . . initially, I took it as construction on our street.

Daphne Wood

I live by the hospital so I thought it was the helicopter. A friend phoned and I watched the Seattle station to get the current news.

Gladys Kelsey

I was in Chemainus outside. The ground shook and then I carried on as normal.

So, justice is done!
The criminals are in jail. That will teach you to stand up for your environment.

So, Texada must be satisfied. Now they can continue full-scale to strip the forest of its beauty, destroying the web of sustenance and interdependence.

Have we evolved at all? Does this not remind us of medieval practices? Confess or else!

The complacency of this island is frightening. It is time to wake up!

Protect it forever

Not so long ago it was unheard of to buy drinking water.

Now it is not unusual for people to drive all the way to Ruckle Park to pump a week's supply or to purchase purified drinking water — which I would refuse to do.

So I am extremely grateful that I can still drink clean water from Maxwell Lake.

Let's hope this source of drinking water will stay protected, forever.

Millions spent

So, have you read your copy of the BC HealthGuide? Seen all the fine advertisements for it in the newspapers?

Isn't this being paid for by a government that is constantly pleading a shortage of funds for health care?

This publication cost millions of dollars, and was published in the U.S. — not in B.C.

Could they not have used those millions to fund the training of nurses, the hiring of healthcare workers, making settlements with physicians and purchasing much needed equipment?

Remember this when you go to the ballots in the forthcoming election!

Greens were first

Contrary to your February 28 article which stated the NDP was "first off the blocks" to announce its local candidate, Green Party candidate Andrew Lewis was nominated way back in the last millennium in September 2000.

Saanich North and the Islands Green Party Association now has 190 members, up 400 per cent from a year ago. Likewise, the Green Party of B.C. has increased membership to over 2,500, up from about 800 a year ago.

The Green Party has 20 nominated candidates and another 30+ nominations in the works. We intend to run a full slate of candidates in the forthcoming election. We will be the third party to run a full slate.

As a result, we expect our leader Adriane Carr to be invited to participate in the leaders' televised debate.

The Green Party is the only provincial party with both a female leader, Adriane Carr, running in Powell River-Sunshine Coast, and deputy leader, Colleen McCrory, running in Nelson-Creston.

Also, our Green candidate Betty Krawcsyk is running against Premier Ujjal Dosanjh in Vancouver-Kensington.

Betty spent several months in prison for protecting old-growth forests in the Elaho. Betty is a 72-year-old great-grandmother.

The completed Green Party platform will be released on March 13, the day before the Legislature sits for the spring session.

No justice

More than 500 Salt Springers have now signed a petition asking for clemency for Robert Latimer.

Many of us think that he is the victim of a gross miscarriage of justice.

To exacerbate the situation he has now been transferred to a maximum security prison in Prince Albert where, unless he is granted clemency, he will be held in maximum security for a minimum of two years (a new policy enunciated by the solicitor general on February 21).

This man's fate and the welfare of his family is again caught up in a system that is incapable of justice or compassion.

If this situation disturbs you, please let your feelings be known by writing to your MP, the Minister of Justice, the Prime Minister, the Solicitor General and any other cabinet ministers or MPs.

A website to keep people posted on the whole affair has been set up and can be viewed at "www.robertlatimer.com".

Ethics in journalism . . . and making the TV news

By ANASTACIA WILDE

Trust and respect are crucial tenets in journalism. Without them, the reputation of a journalist is corrupted and the news outlet for which she toils can swiftly be thrown into disrepute.

For a journalist to be trusted, she must prove herself an accurate reporter, skillful with words and sharp in balance, insight and analysis.

The past two weeks I've been working arduous days, covering the trial of nine individuals charged with criminal contempt of court for impeding the free flow of Texada Land Corporation logging trucks on Salt Spring Island.

To dub the trial educational and elucidating would be an understatement, for peripheral events such as earthquakes, crowds in the courtroom and me hitting the 6 o'clock news also took the limelight. The latter was unintentional, of course, and so I submit my version of events leading to my airing on CHEK-TV.

It was lunchtime outside the courthouse last Monday and I was occupied juggling camera, notepad and apple, reporting a small rally/theatre piece staged by Susheela Dawne, Arvid Chalmers and friends.

As normal procedure, I scoured the crowd for details, counting people and taking notes. I noticed an anchorwoman for CBC Radio and two unidentified cameramen, both of whom were filming the event. Television or radio presence is "news" in itself for an island weekly like the Driftwood, so I asked one cameraman where he worked. He ignored the question and abruptly walked away. I also spoke to the other cameraman who said he was an independent filmmaker.

Minutes passed and I saw the nameless cameraman filming Salt Spring resident Tamar Griggs. As I neared the tiny group of onlookers a man started to ask him a question but he bolted off again.

"Who is that guy?" someone asked.

Tamar joined Salt Spring resident Annica Burnaby and made a beeline to acquire his name. I strolled behind them, now curious at the mounting intrigue brought about by the elusive man.

I missed an exchange of words and suddenly Mr. Mysterious shoved a camera in my face and started filming me.

Without hesitation and feeling indignant, I put my palm over his camera lens. He accused me of assault. I identified myself as a journalist for the Driftwood newspaper. He said I should know better and continued filming.

Heart pounding, adrenaline racing and incredulous, I walked away, unaware he worked for CHEK-TV.

I debriefed with a Salt Spring man who revealed he also had a squabble with the anonymous cameraman. I then chatted briefly with a photographer from the Times Colonist, wrapped up another interview and headed for afternoon court.

When I got home I called my editor to report in.

"You're all over the news," she said. "Did you assault that cameraman?"

Huh?
I learned CHEK-TV called Driftwood after the "incident" to complain about my inflammatory manner. I also learned CHEK-TV executives chose to forego footage of the street theatre (which was amply recorded) and opted instead to broadcast me as a protester who didn't want the event filmed, implying I blocked CHEK-TV coverage.

I was never contacted directly by CHEK-TV to relay my side of the story.

Four hours of writing and five hours of sleep later, I called sister-station BCTV and spoke to Keith Baldrey. He defended the cameraman's behaviour, said "he can't go around telling everyone who he was" and criticized me because "in all his years in news he had never seen a reporter put a hand over a television camera."

I pointed out I didn't put my hand over a television camera; I put my hand over an unidentified camera, carried by an unidentified man who snubbed all opportunity to reveal himself in my presence. When I told him I felt defamed, he laughed at me. He made it plain I was in the wrong. Then he told me not to worry, it was over.

Not so fast.

I may be a junior reporter but isn't it customary for television crews to visibly signal their station?

This wasn't a procession of Girl Guides selling chocolates. Last Monday's theatre protest came in the midst of a fierce logging battle and highly-charged trial. Everyone and their mother — Texada, Dorman Timber, RCMP, protesters — has been shooting videotape to support their cause or incriminate their adversaries.

Why does CHEK-TV not simply flag the camera and dispel the guesswork?

My brush with the unflagged cameraman has fortified and invigorated my commitment to even-handed reporting, trustworthiness and respect of the public which I serve. I believe a journalist should immediately and willingly identify herself if so requested, never allowing secrecy or suspicion or arrogance to be aroused or dominate her conduct.

Journalists live in the public eye and as such inherit the privilege and responsibility to exemplify integrity, forthrightness, transparency, fairness, open-mindedness and sensitivity.

Without these principles, esteem for journalism will perish and the dissemination of information will fall into the hands of sensationalists, gossip-mongers and opportunists.

The writer is a Driftwood reporter.

Keep SS rockin'
Undoubtedly many islanders will enjoy the production of Grease currently being staged by our high school students.
And if they are true music lovers they will marvel at the "pit band" which accompanies the actors and singers.
These talented musicians are themselves high schoolers and many of them were first introduced to their particular instruments while under the tutelage of Bruce Creswick, band leader extraordinaire of the Salt Spring Island Middle School (SIMS) band.

Each year Mr. C., as he is universally referred to by his students, takes another enthusiastic group of Grade 6 students and drags them into a cohesive unit producing sounds that are recognizable as tunes by their proud families. By the time these students leave Grade 8, they are well-prepared to move onward and upward and to continue the musical traditions of Salt Spring Island.

Although students provide their own instruments there are insufficient funds in our district budget to provide for the big ticket items such as a piano. Therefore, the students and band parents have organized a non-stop music day for Friday, March 9 at SIMS, where music will flow from 8 a.m. until 10 p.m.

The students themselves, plus former band students and members of the island's music community will play non-stop throughout the day until 7 p.m. when the stage will become the Parents Talent Night Cabaret. Word has it that the calibre of talent to be displayed that night cannot be described by mere mortals. Bring an extra pair of socks as yours are certain to be blown off by what you will see and hear.

Middle school students are currently collecting pledges for the Music-a-thon so please be generous

There was a time when managing your money was simple. Savings were kept in the local bank and stockbrokers sold securities.

Today, investors have access to a wide variety of financial professionals offering all kinds of services. There are more than 30,000 stocks worldwide, thousands of different corporate and government bonds, and more than 3,000 different mutual funds available in Canada.

All of your investments should be coordinated to work in harmony toward your financial objectives. That's why it's important to find a full-service financial professional who not only can help you establish sound financial goals, but also has the training and expertise to implement a proper investment plan.

Choosing that person is no simple task. It demands the same attention as hiring an accountant or lawyer with whom you plan to establish a long and successful business relationship. You should only consider qualified investment professionals who offer product knowledge, convenience and a commitment to continue working with you as your financial objectives change. The media is filled with advertising about investments, many of which may or may not be right for you. An investment professional who knows about a variety of investment products can help you to select investments that meet your financial objectives and your need for safety. Sales people with access to only a limited selection of investments cannot offer this level of service.

In addition, because successful investing is a long-term undertaking, your investment advisory should be eager to establish a long-term relationship. This means helping you build a customized plan to meet your objectives. When you speak with your investment professional, he or she should have your records available, understand your long-term objectives, and be able to act quickly on your behalf.

Given today's global economy, changing tax laws and the tremendous number of investment choices, a competent, full-service professional can be the key to meeting your financial goals.

What to expect from a full-service financial professional we talked to the police officer, we did not know that he was from CHEK-TV.

JOAN RUSSOW, Victoria
Defending Anastacia
On Monday, February 26, an incident occurred at a rally in front of the law courts in Victoria involving a cameraman we later discovered was from CHEK-TV. He had filmed the comedy "Lady Justice" and had interviewed me about the responsibilities of being a Canadian citizen, since I recently became one.
Our duty as Canadians has a direct correlation to the trial at hand. Every one of us has the responsibility to ensure Canada stays green for the health and welfare of future generations. Economic growth cannot continue at the expense of the environment.
A CHEK-TV cameraman carried a camera with no media outlet identification on it. There was no evidence of CHEK-TV cars. The cameraman was interviewing a resident of Salt Spring and when asked to identify the media outlet he represented, he refused. He was antagonistic and failed to respect the sensitivity of the protesters about unidentified filming. He said he had already identified himself before and did not need to identify himself continually.
A Driftwood reporter came on the scene and asked him who he was. He refused to say. He appeared to be provoking her by filming her while she was expressing concern because a member of the media had refused to identify himself. She placed her hand over the lens of the camera to prevent him from continuing to film her.
He went over to talk to the police and afterwards got into a car that was not marked CHEK-TV. Until the "flare-up incident" and not on the TV editors chose to focus on her.

He became belligerent, refusing to identify himself, in spite of several peoples' requests. We were concerned and alarmed. The argument became heated, and he ran the film again, right in the face of a Driftwood reporter. She had identified herself as a reporter (not a protester) and was incensed at his arrogance. In defence, she put her hand over his camera lens. Then she turned away, and he crossed the street and left, to our stunned disbelief.
The TV editors chose to focus on the "flare-up incident" and not on the key to meeting your financial goals.

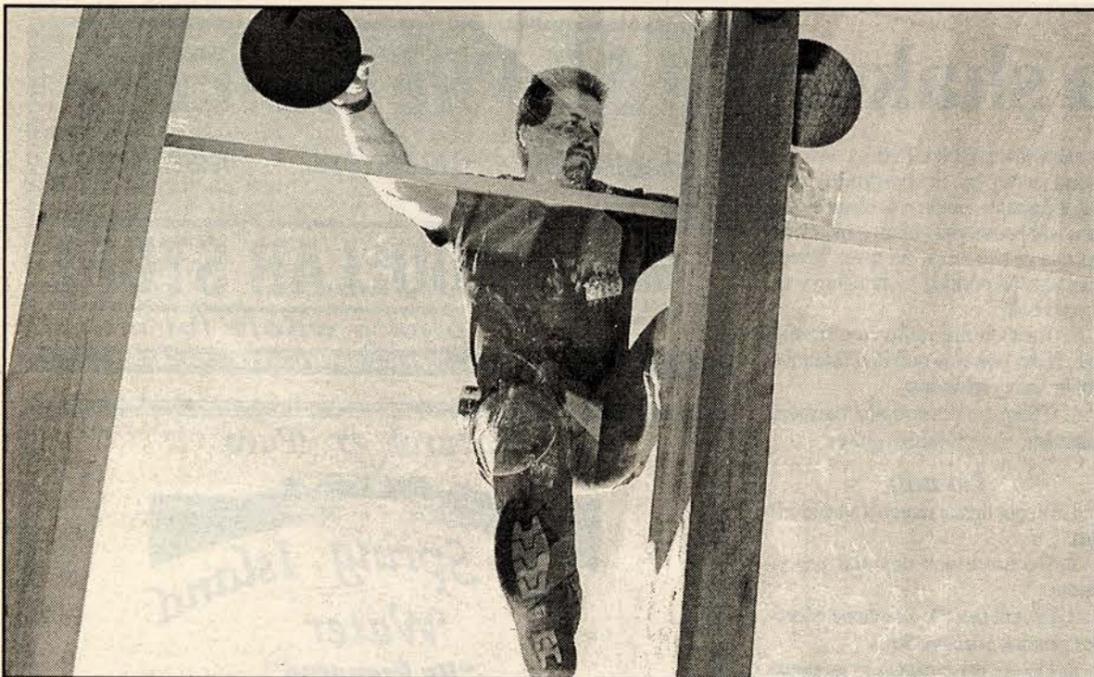

And the spirit of the rally, which was peaceful, funny and creative, with an underlying tension because nine of our islanders' lives are on line for criminal conduct, when it is their duty as Canadian citizens to protect the environment.
On CHEK-TV that night, the story line implied that we and our Driftwood reporter prevented the cameraman from filming the event. This is a flat, outright lie.

As many eye-witnesses can attest, he had completed his task and was crossing the street to leave when the incident occurred!

Wouldn't it have been simpler if this cameraman had replied, "CHEK-TV"?

Two sustainable groups

For the past 10 months I have been working with the Economic Growth for a Sustainable Salt Spring Advisory Committee on a project to develop an economic profile for the island.

The name of this committee is easily confused with the Sustainable Salt Spring Island Coalition, but the two groups are different and although they may share some similar interests they are not related.

Economic Growth for a Sustainable Salt Spring Advisory Committee consists of representatives of organizations and sectors on the island that have an interest in the local economy. Committee members include Maggie Allison, Kellie Booth, Ruth-Ann Broad, Lynne Brown, Lorna Cammaert, Russ Crouse, Jewell Eldstrom, Meror Krayenoff, Doug Mitchell and Tony Threlfall.

The project, funded by Human Resources Development Canada, is to develop a detailed picture of the local economy and to make recommendations that would support increased employment opportunities.

At the end of the project, there will be a public meeting presenting a summary of the information learned, recommendations and proposed future initiatives.

Well, someone did and I am really upset about it!

It was a gift from my son several years ago and when the wind blew, the little golfer was very busy putting the ball. How fast he putted depended on how strong the wind was blowing.

What to do during a shaker

During an Earthquake

1. If you are indoors — get to a designated safe location, which should be under a table, desk or bed, and hang onto the support legs, or brace yourself in a strong doorway, making sure your fingers are safe from door jams. Stay away from windows, glass dividers, bookcases, cabinets, mirrors and shelves.
2. If you are outdoors — move to an open area away from buildings and trees, power lines and poles, brick or block walls, chimneys, glass windows and other areas where objects could be falling. If you are on a street, watch for moving cars shaken from their parked position.
3. If you are in a car — stop the car and stay in it until the shaking stops. Do not stop near trees, power lines, utility poles, underpasses and overpasses.

4. Do not panic. Stay calm.

5. Do not run outside. Debris may be falling, vehicles may be out of control.

6. If you are outside, do not run into the street, under trees, power lines, overpasses or underpasses.

After an Earthquake

1. Put on heavy-soled shoes immediately to avoid injury from stepping on glass and other debris.
2. Check for injuries. Provide first aid if necessary.
3. Inspect your home and check for fires, propane gas leaks, water leaks, electrical damage — turn off the system at the main circuit breaker or fuse box if you detect any frayed wires, sparks or the smell of hot insulation.
4. Check your water supply — if water is off, emergency water supplies may be all around you in water heaters, melted ice cubes, toilet tanks

Do not:

1. Do not light a match if you smell gas.
2. Do not touch downed power lines.
3. Do not use the telephone except for genuine emergencies.
4. Do not drive except in an emergency.
5. Do not crawl under the house to check the foundation.
6. Clean up potentially harmful materials. Use protective gloves.

EARTHQUAKE: Shakes up islands

"That was a big one" ... I saw the walls were shaking and my computer monitor was dancing back and forth in front of me from left to right.

South-end resident Patu Rainbow Song has experienced earthquakes in the 7.0 Richter scale-range. He told the Driftwood that Wednesday's tremor gave him the same kind of sensation.

"It was just as scary as the moments I experienced (in California)," he said.

"I watched the ceiling shaking and could feel the ground vibrate," Patu said he wasn't certain his home's interior was a safe place to be, so he decided to evacuate. "Once outside I could see the ground was shaking everywhere."

Rob Mason in Fulford called the Driftwood to say he thought his wife was jiggling his chair.

GISS principal Nancy Macdonald said she was impressed by her student body's response to the earthquake and how the school's high-tech underground sensor — which takes the "is it or isn't it" guesswork out of the situation — functioned.

She explained that "We have a siren and a voice comes over the PA and says 'Earthquake, earthquake — duck, cover and hold.' Sure enough, everybody did it, and they did the proper counting for 60 seconds."

Besides knowing what to do, At least one islander was affected by the quake as her connecting ing. On another positive note, Salt Spring Centre School primary teacher Janet Hoag said the earthquake actually alleviated some of her grades 1-2 students' fears. For some of the children, previous earthquake discussions had mostly been associated with disaster, so the opportunity to feel a mild quake actually lessened their anxiety over them.

Macdonald said she was determined the quake had not impacted the building. It was determined the six-inch crack was found, among others, it was determined the

Kids scramble under tables in drill at Salt Spring Elementary

While earthquake drills are a regular part of Gulf Islands schools' safety curriculum, last Wednesday's 6.8 earthquake centered south of Seattle gave an extra dose of reality to the often-heard phrase "duck, cover and hold."

At Salt Spring Elementary, teachers have also found a better way to simulate the sound and sensation of an earthquake when it's time to practise the routine.

On Friday, Ann Marie Pearson's Grade 4 class received a crash course in how to create a rumbling ruckus, and then snuck up on another group of students who were innocently choosing books in the library.

Teacher Stacia Kennedy led the quake-makers as they created a realistic crescendo and decrescendo of noise by pounding their fists against the outside of the library wall.

Inside the library it took all of six seconds for every last body part of about 20 children to be tucked safely under a table, with several holding onto table legs as they have been trained to do. (If the sheltering furniture bounces away, its protective value is lost.) Some faces resembled those caught on TV news clips from Seattle Wednesday, transfixed for a second or two as the brain sorted out what was going on.

Ensuring students know what to do if there's an earthquake has acute personal meaning for Kennedy. She was in Grade 7 in Seattle when the last major earthquake struck the region in 1965.

Kennedy told Pearson's students how at the time she was in a home economics classroom with all the sewing machines running, which masked the sound of the quake.

She said that even if she had been able to hear it sooner, she did not know what to do — preparing for an earthquake was not considered a safety-training priority like it is now.

Some girls in her class knew they should be in a doorway, she recalled, so Kennedy crawled with difficulty towards them as the floor rocked underneath her.

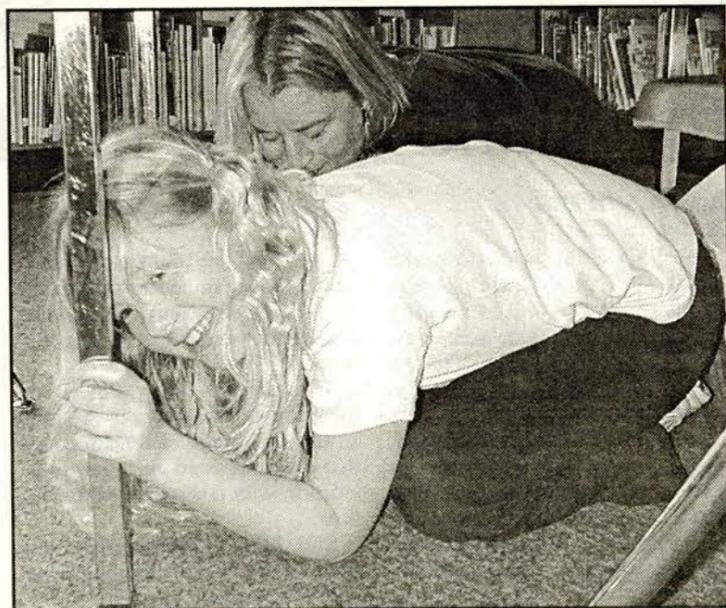

"If you recognize the noise, it can buy yourself enough time to get into a sheltered situation," she said, reminding students that

"it's the falling things that can hurt you."

Kennedy also stressed the importance of being as far from windows as possible, and not facing towards them, since the glass often shoots out during a major quake.

Pearson and a handful of her students had also experienced serious earthquakes in other parts of the world.

While everyone acknowledged an earthquake can be a frightening event, Kennedy gave the children a practical motto for combatting the fear: "Don't be scared; be prepared."

Choirs travel to festival

A chorus of Salt Spring choirs added their voices to the throng as part of the annual Cowichan Valley Music Festival.

Fulford, Salt Spring and Fernwood elementary schools, plus the Lost Chords seniors choir made the trek to Duncan early last week.

Choirs are not awarded "places" as in a competition, but instead receive an adjudication of their strengths and weaknesses.

Mary Rockliffe, Fernwood's choir leader, said the adjudicator gave constructive comments to all the choirs, and one profound comment which stood out above the others. "If anyone is going to make a change in this world for the better, it is going to be the voices of young children," she said.

Fernwood's junior (grades 1-2) and senior (3-5) choirs attended.

Rockliffe said the grades 1-2 children "built it up for weeks and weeks — it's just a huge deal."

She also said the parents accompanying the singers were "very supportive" and understood their children weren't there for "a contest" but to celebrate other important aspects of music.

Singing has become so popular at Salt Spring Elementary that three ensembles were able to participate.

Music director Linda Mills said the school now has a 42-member regular choir, 18 vocalists in a grades 2-5 boys' choir, and an 11-member group of Grade 5 girls who sang in a different category altogether.

"It's becoming quite a popular thing," Mills observed, particularly since children wanting to be in the school's Oliver musical set for early May must be in the choir.

On the down-side, the kids' bus didn't meet them off the ferry in Crofton on the Monday as scheduled, resulting in an unanticipated 45-minute wait.

Linda Quinn also took Fulford Elementary vocalists to Duncan for the event, but was unable to provide a report to the Driftwood by presstime.

Island youngsters weren't the only singers taking their voices and enthusiasm to the festival. The Lost Chords, the Salt Spring seniors choir led by Shirley Bunyan, made their Cowichan festival debut and had a wonderful time.

"They had a fabulously successful performance and got a great adjudication," reported Bunyan.

Twenty-eight of 34 members attended.

MAPPING PROJECT ON DISPLAY: Sunday at ArtSpring. Sixteen of the maps created in the Salish Sea Community Mapping Project will be shown at the event which runs from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

BRIDGE TRICKS

By CONHOR VANE-HUNT
Driftwood Contributor

On February 19 at the Gulf Islands Duplicate Bridge Club, Isabelle Richardson and Joan Conlan came in first, Blanche Poborsa and Glenda Kaiser were second, and Jim Burford and Ron Dickson were third.

On February 26, the scorers were a) amused b) delighted c) appalled d) amazed — multiple choice — to note that on two consecutive boards East was down seven, doubled and, on the very next board, South suffered a similar fate. In my memory, this had never happened previously.

Oh yes, the results: first, Burford and Dickson; second, Brent Vickers and Bill Buckler; and third, Richardson and Conlan.

'Armchair' tour offered by local historical society

Few of Ganges' historical roots show through its shiny, modern surface, but if you take an "armchair walking tour" of the town with Bob Rush, it may never look the same again.

Rush, who was born and raised on Salt Spring, will use slides to illustrate his presentation, revealing where important buildings such as the Ganges Hotel, the blacksmith shop, customs office and creamery once stood.

An Armchair Walking Tour of Historical Downtown Ganges is featured at the Salt Spring Historical Society's next meeting on Tuesday, March 13. The event is free and begins at 2 p.m.

Rush spent his first four school years in the old Ganges Elementary School on Drake Road. As a professional engineer, he was the project engineer for the construction of Gold River and was responsible for transforming Tahsis from a company town to an incorporated municipality.

On Salt Spring, Rush has chaired the organizing committee for three "goldminers" reunions and, for the last 10 years, headed the Salt Spring Island Foundation as it grew from a $25,000 to $600,000 endowment fund.

Accolades for Hastings House

An American magazine has selected the Hastings House on manor, barn, cottages, farmhouse spread over the grounds — in the Salt Spring as one of the "best places for sweet dreams in the West."

The Hastings House is the only Canadian listing in Sunset Magazine's recent announcement of "The West's Best Small Inns."

Says the magazine: "Much more than a house, this 25-acre estate combines the best of Salt Spring on food, home, garden and travel in an easy-going, English country elegance. Lodging, you learn, is by five million people each month.

Spring healing at Bodyworks

Reiki, reflexology, acupuncture, body reading, tea leaf reading — with so many ways to heal, it's no wonder people can get confused about which ones to explore.

Since spring is an optimal time to cleanse the system, the Bodyworks Collective is offering a series of seven Wednesday evening workshops called Spring Healing.

Designed to answer questions about various holistic healing modalities, each session will be led by a Bodyworks member, often accompanied by hands-on demonstrations.

The workshop series begins March 14. They run from 7-9 p.m. and cost $5. People can register in advance or drop in.

For more information, call Tanya Lester at Bodyworks, 538-1988.

doorway over the door — Crombie pours her heart affectionately into the beauty surrounding the vacancy left by her husband's nonexistence. Flowers and furniture and books and outdoor vistas flare brilliantly after death's betrayal, and artist Crombie is doing just that with flying colours.

One would be hard-pressed to deduce that Christine Crombie's colourful display of paintings at Moby's Pub this month depict the loss of her soulmate Bob Jankura two years ago. Crombie's effervescent Empty Chair series is testimony to a lover's fidelity, a wife's eternal loyalty, a survivor's grief and a child's spirited recovery. There is an intrinsic force of life thrust into each and every piece of the artist's broken heart, gentle caresses of fondness splayed thoughtfully across the rough canvases. Indeed, few human beings love enough or are loved with such intensity to implode with a tangible product of their joy and sorrow. From Love Seat/Love Lost to Evening Reading Chair, the power of Crombie's artwork lies not in what the viewer sees, but in the invisible trace left vivaciously alive by her beloved's absence. Beyond physical form, he becomes a pillar of light, an aura of hope, an enchanted angel. Like Taoism, which values emptiness over plenitude — the showing an excellent singing voice in Greased Lightning and strong acting skills throughout.

GREASE: Hot show with cool characters

Tegan Adams, who plays "pink lady" Marty, and teen angel Christina Walls have knock 'em dead singing voices, and the expressive Sheila Profitt can say a thousand words with the flick of an eyebrow or the turn of her body as she plays the hard (with a few soft edges) Rizzo.

Adams' voice carries beautifully throughout the theatre as she sings Freddy My Love from atop a high platform and Walls' Beauty School Drop-out is a performance highlight, augmented by some creative choreography and costumes.

For a little comic relief, one needs only to wait to the dance contest scene for the hilarious, high-energy performance of John-Michael McColl as radio personality Vince Fontaine.

Leads Markiana Jones and Tyler Sayer are well-suited to their parts of Danny Zuko and Sandra D., with Sayer catching and exuding the essence of his character, and Jones singing and acting with great expressiveness.

Watching Gary Lucich as Sonny, I was impressed with his non-faltering ability to stay in character.

All of the pink ladies and greasers were really impressive — in both acting and singing skill. Ara Matheson was great as Frenchy, and Tangle Caron played Jan to perfection. Jack Roland as Roger and Tyler Cocker as Doody also gave memorable performances.

Antagonists to the cool set — Elfi Weir as Patty Simcox, Nico Lohmann as Eugene Florczyk and Laurin Kelsey as teacher Miss Lynch — gave their all to the parts. Weir was particularly perfect in her annoying presence, grinning inanely and bouncing about the stage in a very uncool manner.

My habit of picking out a small-part performer to highlight was easy. While everyone in the chorus danced and sang with wonderful energy — including Andrea Bartle's Cha Cha DiGregorio — one stood out for both me and the person with whom I attended. Jekka Mack's beaming, expressive face and consistent enthusiasm should secure her as a theatrical force among youth performers on Salt Spring.

In the days following my opening-night perusal of Grease, I volleyed back and forth in a personal debate — should I take my young children (seven and nine) to see it. When I first interviewed Pittmann about the show, she referred to its mature content and suggested it might be more appropriate for children in Grades 5 and up.

Some of the content is definitely "racy." And you can't really escape the message: Sandra D. doesn't fit in with the cool kids because she doesn't smoke or drink or "go all the way." Ultimately, she sheds her persona and emerges dressed to kill as one of the crowd ready, one assumes, to fit in.

Yet the entire package of singing and dancing and watching island youth perform is so enticing, it is a shame to block younger kids from attending.

My recommendation to parents who care about the mature content is to take your kids and use the story-line as an opening for dialogue. It is possible younger children won't even get the story — but they will certainly enjoy the visual and auditory feast.

Speaking of auditory, GISS musical director Bruce Smith's Pit Band gets several handfuls of "thumbs up" for its lively accompaniment and scene-change numbers. Student band members include Ben McLean, Phil Albert, Billie Woods, Sandy Curtis, Lee Fairbrother and Roger Guedes.

The band is cleverly located right on the stage, under one side of a double-staircase platform, somehow becoming both hidden and visible.

Every review should include a few complaints and here they are: Some of the dialogue in the first few scenes of the opening night show was lost, perhaps to jitters, by characters who spoke too fast.

This worked itself out on that particular night and was likely not a problem during ensuing shows.

Then there was the squeaky staircase which took away from the subtlety of a few scene changes.

But these are minor points in an otherwise great production that leaves the viewer with a wonderful sense of fun.

Grease continues this week with shows Thursday to Saturday evenings and Saturday afternoon.

May the GISS performing arts department live on to bring us lots more high school productions.

THE BATTLE FOR SALT SPRING

will take place at

ArtSpring, Sunday March 25

One year ago, chainsaws were heard ripping through Salt Spring's early morning silence. A logging operation was underway in the central valley.

Since that time, Islanders have confronted logging trucks and faced the threat of prison terms, all to stop land developers from logging this West Coast paradise.

The award-winning director of Margaret's Museum, Mort Ransen, has turned the camera on this own community to document the fight. "Ah, the Money, the Money, the Money!" The Battle For Salt Spring was produced for the National Film Board by Gillian Darling Kovanic.

Admission is free, but tickets are required.

Film documents Chalmers, cancer, and the Geezers

"Arvid Chalmers has cancer. So why is he laughing?" That's the question Sid Tafler asked as the idea for a documentary film germinated. And Tafler, a friend of Chalmers, is now co-producing a movie that may answer that question.

The movie, co-created by Bill Weaver of Victoria film company Any Across Borders Media, features Chalmers, his cancer and the Geezers comedy duo.

The Geezers — Chalmers and Sid Filkow — were in the midst of creating their latest show last winter when Chalmers was diagnosed with prostate cancer. They wrote the "Arvid Chalmers has cancer. So why is he laughing?"

"Few people see humour in this deadly disease," says Tafler. "But Chalmers and Filkow manage to turn the issue on its head and get audience members — including cancer patients and the doctors who treat them — laughing and cheering at the antics, in daily life, and even on a vacation to Mexico where the Geezers could not resist performing."

The film follows him on stage, in diagnosis, in real life, Chalmers is also faced with surgery, hormone therapy and radiation.

Well-meaning friends advise Mr. Geezer about cures and therapies as he tries to decide between options as varied as radical surgery, hormone therapy and radiation.

In real life, Chalmers is also faced with similar decisions.

The film follows him on stage, in diagnosis, in daily life, and even on a vacation to Mexico where the Geezers could not resist performing.

The cameraman will continue to follow Chalmers now, as he begins drug therapy, Tafler says.

He adds: "In addition to Chalmers' humorous approach, the film also explores serious issues such as prevention, diagnosis and cure of prostate cancer and the close and caring relationship between Chalmers and Filkow, who have known each other for 20 years and performed comedy together for nearly as long."

Tafler is uncertain when the film will be completed or broadcast.

In the meantime, he says, "The film offers a new approach to cancer, an issue that is almost always examined in serious, clinical terms. If laughter is the best medicine, Chalmers might have found a treatment for thousands of men who suffer from this disease — including himself."

He adds: "In addition to Chalmers' humorous approach, the film also explores serious issues such as prevention, diagnosis and cure of prostate cancer and the close and caring relationship between Chalmers and Filkow, who have known each other for 20 years and performed comedy together for nearly as long."

Tafler is uncertain when the film will be completed or broadcast.

In the meantime, he says, "The film offers a new approach to cancer, an issue that is almost always examined in serious, clinical terms. If laughter is the best medicine, Chalmers might have found a treatment for thousands of men who suffer from this disease — including himself."

An interview with Ralph Benmurih on CBC Radio's national morning show Friday has set the phones ringing for Salt Spring Geezers Sid Filkow and Arvid Chalmers.

Performance requests have come from as far away as Calgary and Saskatoon, and visions of a possible cross-Canada tour are now dancing in the duo's heads.

Filkow said they at least hope to perform Topic of Cancer in Vancouver, on Cortes Island and other larger centres on Vancouver Island.

Both shows in Victoria over the weekend were sold out. "Saturday night a lot of people got turned away," said Filkow.

He admitted Topic of Cancer is striking a chord with viewers. "Whether it's the comedy or the cancer or the voyeurism (the scene where Chalmers drops his pants) . . . Now I'm saying people only recognize Arvid when he's walking away from them."

A late-March Gulf Islands tour of Topic of Cancer has already been organized, and the Geezers will be back at Artspring in early May.

Playback on tap for singles

An active series of discussion circles for single people wraps up March 13 with Salt Spring Playback Theatre.

Running at the United Church's lower hall from 7-9 p.m., the final night will see Playback members improvise singles' experiences, and even give them a chance to "re-write" those experiences more to their liking.

"Pain can be released, pleasure can be celebrated," says the series organizer Tanya Lester of the Playback process.

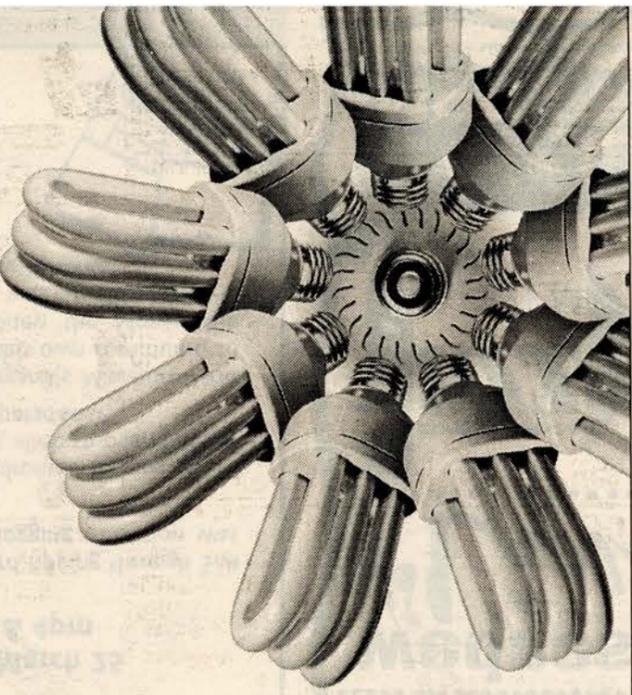

Previous singles sessions were held at the Bodyworks Collective, of which Lester is a member.

"Men and women who have attended one or more of the evenings have been refreshingly candid about their experiences," observes Lester.

"Hearts and minds opened up, friendships have begun or grown."

A singles club has also sprouted from the series.

Anyone wanting more information about the club should call Lester at 538-1988.

Gumboot Gala — a stomping good time at Fulford Hall

By MITCHELL SHERRIN
Driftwood Contributor

Fulford Hall was sold out long in advance for the fourth annual Gumboot Gala.

Salt Spring's own Bill Henderson and Valdy hosted the event. They were joined by guests the Stone Brothers featuring Little Marty, Lisa and Charley Erck, Harry Manx and the Wrangellian Gumboot Ensemble.

Wellingtons, Dry-Kings and Baffins were derigueur footwear among artists and audience members alike at this fancy dress affair. Style mavens in the audience were torn between Henderson's low cut north-enders and Valdy's patched up 653 specials in an impromptu fashion contest.

The Stone Brothers and Little Marty stirred up a good-old-fashioned hoe-down in the hall with vintage tunes such as The Old Home Place, Texas Polka, and Tear Drops in My Heart, that matched their great hats and cow poke duds.

Sascha Stone led the band with crooning vocals and rhythm guitar while Oban and Saeward Stone flicked bows up the frets of their fine fiddles in tight harmony and Little Marty backed them up on washtub bass, giving a phenomenal solo in the tune Calgary Roundup.

Lisa and Charley Erck, of Salt Lick fame, led the audience through a winsome stroll of nostalgic heart-break tunes such as Walk Right Back, Spanish Peaks and China Moon, and I'll See You In My Dreams.

The Ercks cut quite an image with Charley on a tiny, parlour-sized Martin guitar and Lisa with an enormous stand-up bass; both of them smiling and singing in harmony. I was particularly moved by their rendition of the Scottish traditional song Mist Coloured Mountains of Home.

Valdy sprinkled a range of tunes from his copious folk collection into his set. The veteran musical activist even dusted off an old nuclear pollution piece, Hot Rocks, wishing that it was no longer timely, and led the audience to sing along with I've Been Working on the Railroad, ascribed to that prolific writer "Trad."

My most memorable song of Valdy's was his tribute to the Odd Squad of the Vancouver City Police, titled An Odd Way to do Things. It celebrates the humanitarian efforts of officers who assist the underprivileged of the Downtown East Side in their free time.

"I never thought I'd find myself writing a song celebrating police," said Valdy. "I guess things have gone full circle."

The Wrangellian Gumboot Ensemble romped through a powerful display of this traditional South African dance form. The stage thundered with martial intensity to synchronized stomps, boot slaps and hand claps. The crowd was thrilled to cheer by the high energy of this performance and the Wrangellians even attempted to lead the audience through a dance-a-long.

Harry Manx said he felt "honoured to be invited into this circle of fine musicians." No slouch himself, Manx floated shivery slide notes and aching blues out to the audience with tunes such as Bring That Thing from his new CD Dog My Cat.

Switching to banjo, Manx hauled in applause for sparkly Indian raga wanderings within the Bayou-bluesy Sitting On Top Of The World. To take the Southeast Asian/Louisiana cross-cultural experience a little deeper, Manx hauled out an Indian guitar-sitar cross. ("It's hell to tune," Manx intimated) and teased out hypnotic slide rhythms with ringing eastern splashes in Ride That Rail.

KEEPING TIME: Valdy and Bill Henderson pound the drums to keep the beat as gumboot dancers at the Salt Spring Folk Club's Monday night Gumboot Gala take the stage. Below, Driftwood reviewer Mitchell Sherrin dresses for the occasion.

My favourite pieces of the evening involved Henderson, Valdy and Manx performing the old surf kitsch numbers Apache and Sleepwalk. These nostalgic tunes were accompanied by constant giggles and chuckles from the audience as Henderson let loose on his classic Fender and slide harp, tongue set firmly in cheek.

In his solo set, Henderson displayed an interesting mix of personal pieces, revisited Chilliwack hits, and folk rock classics.

One particularly powerful piece was Henderson's dirge of loss, Golan Boys, which offered a wailing tribute with frenetic rhythms to those lost in the buffer zones of war in the Middle East.

Maintaining a tone of lament, Henderson offered "thanks to the people trying to save Salt Spring" and sang Boiling River as a salute to their work. He described the feeling of this wrenching song as "trying to endure something when you don't believe there's another side."

To finish off the evening, the Wrangellians leapt on stage again for a powerful squall of stomping accompanied by Henderson and Valdy on hand drums. The Stone Brothers, Ercks, Manx, Valdy and Henderson then led the audience through a rousing sing-a-long of Buffy St. Marie's Piney Wood Hills and an energetic version of Midnight Special.

With this performance, the Salt Spring Folk Club wraps up another successful season and fans of fine folk music will have to wait till next fall to meet again at Fulford Hall. Proceeds from this fund raiser are designated to purchase a new lighting system for the Folk club, indicating that this healthy organization is continuing to flourish and grow.

Foothills Brass concert series staged

By KAE CHARMAN
Penders Edition Contributor

The third presentation of this year's Gulf Islands Concert Series Promises "butterflies and goose bumps."

Foothills Brass, featuring five outstanding accredited musicians, has been described as a "superb Canadian touring quintet" which creates "a personal connection with a 'delightfully eclectic repertoire'."

Michael Thompson holds a B. Music and was born in England. He picked up the trombone at age 11 in Fort McMurray, Alberta, graduated from McGill University and has been playing concerts since 1981.

Christopher Morrison also has a B. Music. He was a member of the National Youth Orchestra and was Principal Trumpet in the Thunder Bay Symphony. A vintage vehicle aficionado, he also enjoys riding horses incredibly fast.

Rosalie Morrison plays French horn, holds a Masters degree in music and hails from Moncton, New Brunswick. She has studied at Banff Centre for the Arts, has toured with the Royal Winnipeg Ballet and played in orchestras in Halifax and Calgary.

Phillip Seguin holds a B. Music from the University of Windsor, where he played second trumpet in 1983 at the Windsor Symphony, and later in Thunder Bay and Winnipeg.

Kenton McPeck gives a steady bottom to this group on tuba, holds a Masters degree in music and was born in Churchill, Manitoba. He has studied in Winnipeg, Chicago, Phoenix and New York City, and has performed in Canada, the U.S. and Germany. An ardent singer, McPeck is particularly fond of madrigals.

With five CDs to their credit, including the charming The Pink Panther Meets William Tell, their student card.

SPORTS & RECREATION

OUT ON TOP:

A weekend win against Lakehill has springboarded Salt Spring's U18 boys soccer team to the Vancouver Island championships. The title match against Port Alberni takes place this Sunday at Portlock Park, beginning at 12:15 p.m.

U18 boys take Tolmie Cup

Salt Spring's U-18 boys gold soccer team is set to battle Port Alberni for the Vancouver Island championship this weekend after winning the Tolmie Cup Sunday.

It was the third time in seven years that the U-18 squad has been the best south island team in its division.

According to coach Malcolm Bond, the Tolmie Cup game at Lakehill took place in a severe crosswind that favoured the home team in the first half and Salt Spring in the second. Lakehill took advantage in the first five minutes, scoring on a great shot from 18 yards.

Salt Spring stormed back to tie the game at the 15-minute mark, and then dominated for the ensuing 20 minutes.

Play intensified, resulting in injuries to Salt Spring players Jordan Hainen and Brent Schemilt, and a red card for Lakehill.

Salt Spring ended the half up 2-1, maintaining the lead through the end of the game.

The win gave the local team the right to host Port Alberni on Sunday for the Vancouver Island championship and the right to represent the big island at the provincials.

Supporters are urged to attend the March 11 game at Portlock Park, beginning at 12:15 p.m.

U-18 team members are Shane Abrahams, Rhys Beasley, Tyler Cocker, Tye Cook, Tim Courtier, Josh Dunn, Jordan Hainen, Lee Johnson, Tyler Laitinen, Dylan Logan-Webb, Gary Lucich, Dayton MacGregor, Dom Martin, Jeremy Morrison, Jack Roland, Brent Schemilt, Asher Squire and Connor Walsh.

Mafalda Hoogerdyk is team manager.

Synchro honours

A young Salt Spring girl is making waves in synchronized swimming.

Nine-year-old Kayley-Rae Nelson came home from a weekend meet in Nanaimo with first, second and third-place ribbons. Competing in a total of three events, she won first place in the duet competition, second place in the difficult technical category, and third in the routine, in which she competed with six other synchronized swimmers.

The Fernwood School student is in her second year of the sport as part of a Duncan team. She travels to Duncan to train twice every week. Nelson's next meet takes place near the end of April in Kamloops, followed by a May meet at Simon Fraser University.

SIMS players on top of weekend tourneys

Three of four basketball squads from Salt Spring Island Middle School (SIMS) finished their season in style over the weekend.

Both the Grade 7 and Grade 8 girls' teams took top spot in year-end tournaments, while the Grade 8 boys came third and lost by only nine points.

The Grade 8 girls found themselves in a tough final match against Brentwood Saturday.

"The final game was 51-24," said parent Chris Acheson, "but they didn't win it until the last quarter."

Coach Ken Cameron, who is also SIMS' vice-principal and director of athletics, characterized the game as a "hard-fought win. It wasn't 51 easy points."

The semi-final victory against Cowichan Lake was no cakewalk either, said Cameron, even though both SIMS Grade 8 girls' teams had previously beat Cowichan Lake by scores in the 40-4 range.

Cameron explained that SIMS ended up combining its two Grade 8 girls' teams for the weekend wind-up because a number of the athletes were also scheduled to play soccer in a big game on Saturday. (As it turned out, the soccer event was changed to Sunday.) Acheson gave special thanks to volunteers Karen Hosie and Naim Howe.

SIMS' Grade 8 boys lost their final game of the year by a mere nine points to Bonner. Cameron said the team had lost one of its best players to an ankle injury.

The middle school's Grade 7 girls captured their league title with three straight wins in a round-robin tournament.

They beat Mount Prevost 36-4, Queen Margaret's 51-6 and Quamichan 26-9.

Cameron said one of SIMS' secrets to success is its emphasis on defence.

Their players also have an advantage due to skills learned through the in-house Grade 6 Tsunami basketball league, which gives SIMS a jump on teams from other schools.

The Grade 7 boys team winds up its season on Thursday.

SIMS is part of the Central Vancouver Island Athletic Association league.

Cross-country athletes compete at three meets

A "small but strong" team of grades 7 and 8 students is making its mark in the cross-country running circuit on Vancouver Island. The Salt Spring Middle School students have so far competed in three cross-country runs at Mt. Prevost, George Bonner and Shawigan Lake events.

Twelve-year-old Sarah Proctor was Britta Rustad, who took midge girls firsts in each of the two meets she attended — "kick-ing up mud all the way."

In the U13 category, Noah McColl competed at two meets, placing fourth and third. Nick Snetsinger took 29th and 23rd.

Jimmy Dawson, in the midge boys category, took part in all three meets, placing seventh, third and 10th.

Rudolph described the second meet as a typical cross-country course "with logs to jump over, creeks to cross and a steep 100-metre hill to ascend before a race starts." The next competitive run takes place this Friday at George Bonner Middle School.

The island championships are set for March 14.
